Plots to Slay All Europe's Royalty Laid To Terrorists

One of Slav Suspects Held as Accomplice in Assassination.

Third Is Captured Trying to Escape

Pair Admit Balkan Band Sent Them to France on 'Secret' Mission.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Paris, Oct. 12.—Secret police, trailing an international terrorist ring they declare seeks to wipe out all Europe's rulers, today formally charged one of two men held at Annemasse with complicity in the Marseille murders, and seized still another suspect.

The Annemasse police announced Yaroslav Novak admitted he belonged to the band of Petrus Kalemen, the mysterious Marseille Assassin, and said he confessed after two days of gruelling questioning his real name was Zvonemer Pospechi, and he was born in Yugoslavia in 1904.

In Paris ten nuns watched over the candle-lighted body of Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, whose death at Marseille diplomats held no less important to the continent than Alexander's. His state funeral was scheduled for tomorrow.

Deny Knowing Mission.

Secret police at Annamasse drew admissions from the two suspects held there that a Balkan revolutionary band sent them to France, but they insisted, despite 36 hours of questioning, they did not know what their mission was.

"We never betray our organization," they were reported to have told police.

The authorities, nevertheless, believed their task and that of Kalemen was to slay Alexander and charged the terror ring sought the elimination of all Europe's rulers.

The arrest of a third alleged member of the terrorist group came at Chambery, and the prisoner, who police said was seeking to flee into Italy through an Alpine pass, gave his name as Quiqueran Debauzen, 40, resident of Austria. He said he was born at Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

He was reported to have confessed being at Aix-en-Provence, where Kalemen stayed, with two companions, the day of the killing.

After questioning the two suspects at Annemasse, it was asserted that police suspected an international terror group with headquarters at Janka Puszta, Hungary, just over the Yugoslav border.

Hungarian Reply.

(Previous dispatches from Geneva suggested this group, which apparently had taken the name of the Hungarian city where it had headquarters, might have been responsible, but the Hungarian foreign

Socialites Hurt In Plane Crash

Upperville, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.)—Three society leaders, who received minor injuries late yesterday when an airplane "cracked up" on the John Hay Whitney estate near here, did not let cuts and bruises deter them from witnessing the fourth annual Llangollen Race Meet on the Whitney farm this afternoon.

Flying from New York to "Llangollen," the home of the Whitney's, for today's steeplechase, Mrs. Eleanor Jones, Mr. Whitney and Milton Holden were bruised and cut when the plane overturned in making a forced landing after the motor went dead. The plane, owned by Whitney, was wrecked.

Edgar Woodham, the pilot, suffered minor injuries. Whitney received a cut over one eye.

Whitney, who with his wife, the former Miss Elizabeth Altemus, of Philadelphia, are hosts at the annual racing meet, appeared to enjoy the events as usual today despite his injuries.

Wallace Beery Injured In Movie Fight Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 12 (AP).—Injured in a movie fight scene, Wallace Beery was confined to his home today nursing a torn ligament in his ankle and injuries to the foot.

Beery declined an opportunity to have a double do the scene for him and he was thrown heavily to the floor. Dr. Harry W. Martin said it may be several weeks before Beery fully recovers.

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—The former Lady Furness, twin sister of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, arrived in New York today to take her place in Park Avenue's current cause celebre—the court fight of Mrs. Vanderbilt for custody of her 10-year-old daughter-heiress.

"Of course the charges are ridiculous," Lady Furness, the former Thelma Morgan Converse, exclaimed. "It's all lies; it's a gross injustice."

She referred to charges made by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, sister-in-law of Mrs. Vanderbilt, that the latter is an unfit mother for Gloria Vanderbilt, $8,000,000 heiress. Testi-

Stock Report Fails to Ask For New Acts

Inquiry Comes to Close, Silent on Change in Securities Law.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday ended 31 months' investigation of stock market practices with a statement that legislation alone cannot entirely remove "disturbing elements" uncovered.

The committee's long awaited "conclusions" carried no recommendations for new legislation.

Instead, their final report appealed for "the undivided cooperation of industrialist, financier, and investor, with a mutual recognition of their reciprocal rights and duties."

The Senate investigating group, before whose colorful hearings passed such figures in finance as J. P. Morgan, jr., the late Otto Kahn, and Albert H. Wiggin, left legislative proposals suspended in air, with strong implications that none may be offered by the committee as a whole.

Avoids Securities Act.

Officials of the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission are known to be studying possible moderation of the drastic securities law already enacted, widely heralded by business men as definitely retarding recovery. On this subject the final report did not touch.

"Legislation has been enacted, designed to eradicate those factors which may adversely affect our economic conditions," the committee stated. "Further legislation may be necessary to fully accomplish this purpose. Certain it is that legislation alone cannot completely eliminate these disturbing elements."

From his Florida retreat, Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher announced a detailed and comprehensive outline "may" form the subject of a subsequent formal report. In all events, said the committee chairman, he would have "some definite recommendations of his own."

Cost of the many-cycled investigation which catapulted Ferdinand

Kidnapers of Girl, 16, Sentenced in Colorado

Cortez, Colo., Oct. 12 (AP).—A lashing with a bull whip was the penalty Chester Helmich and Mack Carver would have received if the law permitted it, Judge George Bruce told the men today as they were sentenced to prison for kidnaping a 16-year-old girl.

The men, both married, were accused of taking the girl to Denver and detaining her three weeks. Each was sentenced to serve from two to five years.

Morgenthau Calls 4¼% Liberty Bonds

$1,870,000,000 of Issue Will Be Redeemed Next April 15.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Continuing the Administration policy of refunding obligations bearing high interest rates into less costly financing, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday called $1,870,000,000 of outstanding 4¼ per cent, fourth Liberty Loan bonds for redemption next April 15.

The bonds require that six months notice prior to an interest date be given in calling them for redemption before maturity in 1938. This is the third allotment of the Fourth Liberties called within the last year and those included in yesterday's action were bonds bearing serial numbers ending in the digit 5, 6 or 7. In the case of coupon bonds those called bear the letter E, F or G before the serial number.

Morgenthau's Statement.

Mr. Morgenthau made no announcement of a conversion option that might be exercised by the holders of these securities, but his formal statement asserted that "it is probable prior to April 15, 1935, the holders may be offered the privilege of exchanging their called bonds for other interest-bearing obligations of the United States."

Since the objective which inspired the call for another allotment of the Fourth Liberties is to reduce the interest charge on the public debt and since financial conditions must be relatively stable for the Treasury to borrow at low interest rates, Mr. Morgenthau's action was taken in some quarters as another indication that there is

Woman Ends Life With Her Pet Dog

Ex-Representative's Widow Found Dead in Kitchen.

The body of Mrs. Emma K. Alderson, 57, of the 2200 block of Fourteenth street northwest, widow of John Alderson, former member of Congress from West Virginia, was found in the gas-filled kitchen of her apartment yesterday.

Nearby lay the body of her poodle, Toodles, her inseparable companion.

Four gas jets on the stove were open, detectives said. They found a metal box containing a will and insurance papers on a nearby table.

At the apartment house neighbors of Mrs. Alderson said she had been despondent because of ill health. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Mrs. Alderson's neighbors said she was very fond of her dog, which had been given her as a present last Christmas. No notes were found in the apartment.

Alfonso Going to Rome.

Rome, Oct. 12 (AP).—Former King Alfonso of Spain apparently will spend the winter in Rome, judging from the fact that he has taken a six-month lease on the sumptuous villa of the opera singer, Tito Ruffo, in the new north city suburb.

Devaluation Move Denied By President

Say No New Inflation Is Planned to Get Rise in Prices.

By Elliott Thurston.

President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Senator J. Ham Lewis all took a hand yesterday in banishing the resurrected specter of new monetary manipulations to raise the price level.

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt, fingering his cigarette holder and smiling indulgently, mildly reproved those bewildered reporters who had inferred from Mr. Roosevelt's advocacy of higher prices, from the White House visit of Prof. George F. Warren, and from Senator Bulkley's unguarded comments on inflationary possibilities, that some new "money magic"—to use Secretary Wallace's phrase—was about to be conjured from the Brain Trust's bag of tricks.

Mr. Roosevelt, as the Associated Press put it, "laughed off conflicting reports that further devaluation of the dollar or some other monetary step was in prospect."

Not an Astrologist.

He added, when pressed to say whether any change will be made in the gold policy, that he is neither a prestidigitator nor an astrologist.

Senator Bulkley's call, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized, had been political—apropos of getting a Government berth (Director of the Budget preferred by the applicant) for former Representative West, of Ohio. Not a word had passed between him and the Senator, said Mr. Roosevelt, about devaluing the dollar or about inflation, deflation or reflation.

And Mr. Roosevelt, still smiling, implied the Senator had only been trying to accommodate the persistent press by thinking up a good story.

Meanwhile, across the street, the Treasury was rushing to announce, three days ahead of time, that it was calling in $1,870,000,000 more of Fourth Liberty 4¼s for redemption April 15. And it might be fairly inferred from this that no fresh monetary "magic" is in view. Indeed, to many observers, the Treasury's action is more persuasive than any words in portending both orthodoxy and stability.

Advisers on Trip.

Subsequently it became known that Secretary Morgenthau and George Harrison, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, were leaving last night to accompany Mr. Roosevelt on his week-end cruise. This news served to revive rumors of stabilization instead of more inflation.

There is a good deal of intra-Administration talk about "stability" rather than stabilization—talk about the existence now of what amounts to a de facto, temporary stabilization, unproclaimed to be sure, since stabilization is still a red flag to the inflationists, but nevertheless existing for all practical purposes.

As for Mr. Morgenthau's attitude toward the now deflated inflation rumor, he frowned rather than laughed it off. Perhaps it would be most accurate to say he scoffed at deductions that the Presidential higher prices talk, plus Prof. Warren, plus Senator Bulkley, por-

Roosevelt Boards Ship for Week-End

Will Discuss Finances on Chesapeake Bay Cruise.

The quiet of Chesapeake Bay and the seclusion of the yacht Sequoia were chosen by President Roosevelt last night for a week-end of rest and financial talk, according to the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department boat, which has taken the place of the one-time Presidential yacht Mayflower, was anchored off the Naval Academy at Annapolis to receive the Roosevelt party.

The President did not decide upon the cruise until late in the day and delayed his departure from the White House until after dinner. He expects to return Sunday night.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Adopting the recommendations of a special committee, President Roosevelt yesterday ordered into effect a 36-hour work week for the cotton garment industry, comprising 4,000 manufacturers in 42 States, beginning on December 1.

This action sustained, with some modifications, the President's original order of August 21, which directed the industry to reduce hours from 40 to 36 on October 1, without a corresponding reduction in wages.

Unusual significance was attached to this order, beyond its effect in spreading work among the 200,000 cotton garment workers, because it marked the first such use of Presidential powers under the Recovery act.

In announcing the President's order, the White House pointed out that under an agreement with the industry the findings of the special committee, which had been named when the code authority protested the first order, were to be accepted as final.

Thus the cotton garment manufacturers, who had declared they could neither "accept nor acquiesce" to the original order, found themselves bound, through their code authority, to virtually the same terms while winning a delay of two months.

Concessions to Industry.

Other concessions won by the industry in the report of the special committee, which was approved in whole by the President, were:

Appointment of a committee of three by the National Industrial Recovery Board to investigate and report by December 1 on competition from prison labor and sheltered workshops.

Authorization for the existing impartial committee of three to continue its inquiry and to report by November 15 on protests by the sheep-lined and leather garment subdivisions of the industry.

Requirement that the Recovery Board, on or before January 15, report to the President on the operation of provisions in the cotton garment code which govern the granting of exceptions and exemptions.

"The latter," a White House statement said, "was based on a recommendation of the committee that exemptions should be allowed sparingly and only for good cause since 'anything resembling wholesale exemptions would undermine the code and the splendid enforcement which the code authority, as now set up, is accomplishing.'"

The President himself announced his action at his press conference, reading from a prepared digest of the case. He made no further comment beyond stating, in reply to a question, that he had no idea what other industries might be in line for similar action.

First Order Postponed.

The cotton garment inquiry originated in a code provision requiring that a study be made of its labor sections in operations. Hearings were conducted in June, as a result of which, the White House stated, the President signed his order of August 21 reducing hours.

This met with instant protest by the industry's code authority, which ultimately prevailed upon the President to stay his order under Octo-

Riggs Suspects Held in St. Louis

Washington will not get the two suspects in the sensational robbery of $150,000 in bonds from the Riggs Bank on February 7, 1929, who were arrested Thursday in St. Louis, Mo., it was learned last night.

Charges of grand larceny have been placed against the pair in the Missouri city. They will stand trial on these charges before authorities will be able to bring them here for trial.

The men are William Evans and Ralph Oakes. Police charge that they snatched the securities from the local bank after a telephone call by a woman confederate had lured a clerk away from her desk.

Three Children Admit Slaying Playmate, 7, Who Played 'Cop'

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 12 (AP).—Three boys, two of them 6 years old and the third only 4, admitted late today, police announced, that they were responsible for strangling 7-year-old John Feeney, jr., whose body, with a rope around the neck, was found crammed in a trunk in a squatter's shack earlier today.

Police witheld the names of the three children, but it was learned one of them was the victim's brother, James, 4.

The four boys, police said they learned, were playing "cops and robbers" near the abandoned bed of the Morris Canal yesterday, with John Feeney representing a policeman and the other three playing burglars.

The "burglars" captured John, tied him up in the shack, and put the rope around his neck. Through with the game, they cut the rope around the boy's arms and legs and started for home, telling John to go with them.

Police said John apparently was lapsing into unconsciousness at the time and fell into the trunk. One of the boys closed the top and the three went home.

Floyd Dodges Posses; Plane Joins in Hunt

'Pretty Boy' and Richetti Reported Seen in Three Communities; All Roads Blocked; Killers Stop Salesman, He States.

Kansas City, Oct. 12 (AP). — The Southwest's two most notorious outlaws — Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd and his companion, Adam Richetti—were hunted by posses in central and eastern Missouri tonight, after the elusive killers, reported sighted in at least three communities, had dodged police traps throughout the day.

A National Guard airplane, equipped with two-way radio communication, and carrying a machine gun, was ordered from St. Louis to aid State, county and city officers in the Missouri manhunt.

Bridges and highway junctions were barricaded and guarded. State highway partolmen in radio-equipped motor cars aided in spreading the net in which it was hoped to trap the desperadoes named by the Department of Justice as two of the three "trigger men" who killed four officers and a convict at the Kansas City Union Station June 17, 1933.

The manhunt was launched after O. L. Blanchard, Kansas City salesman, and former detective, reported he had seen a man answering Floyd's description five miles south of Mexico, Mo., this morning.

Blanchard said three men confronted him with revolvers when he stopped to offer them aid because their automobile apparently was stalled. After he convinced them his car was not speedy enough for their use, they ordered him to "head down the road," he said.

Officers expressed belief one of the two men with Floyd was Richetti, and the other was Shine Rush, a known companion of "Pretty Boy" and Richetti. The man believed to be Rush was on the rear seat of the car, groaning in apparent pain, Blanchard said.

Missouri officers, who had been watching for Floyd since he escaped after a running gun battle with Iowa officers yesterday, took up the chase immediately.

At one time, Floyd and his companions were reported surrounded in a corn field south of Mexico. The trail was lost later 12 miles

Atwell Entry Wins Virginia Steeplechase

By Bill McCormick
(Post Staff Correspondent).

Llangollen Farm, Va., Oct. 12.—Racing with the craft and guile reaped through years of grueling experience, Huffy, a grizzled veteran, today thundered down the stretch ahead of a clamoring pack of younger and stronger opponents to win the Llangollen National Steeplechase on the breakneck Whitney course here.

A colorful crowd witnessed the victory of Mrs. George Atwell, jr.'s, entry in the fourth running of the Virginia classic.

Clustered about the observation platform, from atop tallyhoes and from points of vantage at the more ominous jumps, some 18,000 cheered as the winner outlasted three determined threats to maneuver past the finish line ahead of J. W. Y. Martin's Luckite, which was showing its heels to Gaston.

The throng cheered as Huffy thundered past Old Bachelor and beat off the determined effort of Luckite in the stretch to finish in the record-threatening time of 6:06.

Mrs. Whitney cantered to the starting line with Old Bachelor, an English importation which was burdened with the excessive poundage because of its record overseas. The foreigner leaped into an early lead and maintained it throughout the first circuit of the hazardous course.

Virginia Schoolgirl Kills Self With Gun

Dies in Alexandria Crying of Love for Mother.

"Mother, I love you so much. Please, I——"

Sobbing these final words in Alexandria Hospital, Florence Jones, 16, of Burke, Va., died yesterday, several hours after shooting herself with her father's shotgun.

The girl, a high school student, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Jones, was found in her locked bedroom after relatives and neighbors, attracted by the shot, hurried to the spot.

On a table was a note to Florence's mother. It told of despondency and a shattered will to live.

Dr. R. E. Feagans, of Fairfax, ordered the girl to Alexandria Hospital. There he prepared for an emergency operation, but it was too late.

Relatives said the girl recently suffered a nervous breakdown.

A. F. L. Flays Clay Williams' Labor Record

Roosevelt Urged to Probe Policies of New NRA Executive.

San Francisco, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor was reelected for the tenth consecutive year in closing sessions of the organization's fifty-fourth convention tonight.

San Francisco, Oct. 12 (AP).—S. Clay Williams, a member of the new NRA board was criticized by the American Federation of Labor today for what it described as his "biased, unfair and inconsiderate" position.

The federation convention, after shouting down attempts of alleged Communists to put a series of proposals before the floor, adopted unanimously and without discussion a resolution condemning Williams' attitude toward labor and asking President Roosevelt to investigate his record.

A proposal for enlargement of the federation's executive council, the administrative and policy-making body, then drew the delegates into a wordy battle.

Lewis Favors Increase.

A committee report recommended enlargement of the council to 15 members instead of the present eight. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and powerful exponent of a "more democratic and representative" council, originally had favored an increase to 25.

President William Green and James M. Duffy, president of the International Potters Union, staged a lively word duel when the latter charged Lewis had sought to enlarge the council "as a means of forcing discrimination on the convention."

The committee recommending the Williams resolution told the convention it was "improper to appoint an individual to the NRA whose public record shows him opposed to trade unions and to collective bargaining as set forth in sections 7(a) and 7(b) of the NRA."

"Difficult to Cooperate."

"It is difficult," said the committee report, "if not impossible, for trade unions to cooperate with an individual who denies their right to organize."

The NRA board member was accused of having said 40 cents an hour was an "excessive minimum wage" to be made effective for skilled workers; that he opposed a code for his own industry (tobacco), and that when a code finally was "forced" for that business he presented a provision which would have permitted wages as low as 12 cents an hour.

Speeding Roadster Changed en Route

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 12 (AP).—Berry V. Stoll today met all ransom requirements of the abductor of his wife, returned home from a furious automobile drive to southern Kentucky in the wake of another machine, and tonight anxiously awaited some word from the man or group who got the $50,000 paid out for Mrs. Stoll's safe return.

Down the highways today, cleared as if for a cross-country race by sheriffs of counties along the route, went Stoll's machine at top speed. Ahead of it, reports from several towns said, was another machine carrying among other passengers a woman with a bandaged head. Whether this was Mrs. Stoll, or perhaps some one trying to throw curious crowds off the scent, there was no clew. The car was not stopped.

"We have carefully followed instructions, met all ransom requirements, and are awaiting fulfillment of promises.

"The parties may act freely without fear of hindrance."

Eager To Make Terms.

The wealthy and influential Speed and Stoll families repeatedly affirmed by radio and newspapers that they were eager to make terms and would do everything necessary to the victim's return.

There was no intimation in the short announcement as to whether the ransom had been handed over to the actual kidnaper or to persons agreed upon by him.

It was a lone man who got in the Stoll home in the fashionable but remote Upper River road neighborhood Wednesday on the pretense that he was a telephone repair man. With a pistol he cowed Ann Woolet, the maid who let him in, made her tape Mrs. Stoll's hands, then tied and gagged her.

Mrs. Stoll was in a negligee and had been ill. The women were alone. When she offered him a check to let her go the man hit her on the head with an iron pipe. Bleeding, she pleaded with him.

Threatened to Kill Husband.

"If Berry comes in I'll kill him," the kidnaper said. He let his victim stop only for a blue and white checked coat before rushing her away.

Since Mrs. Woolet saw her rushed out the door to a small car, the daughter of one of Kentucky's first families has not been seen nor heard from.

After begging for isolation so the kidnapers could get in touch with them, the Stolls waited 40 hours without word, they said. Except for one untraced telephone call that was broken off before anything could be learned, there was only a succession of futile clews until this morning.

Then out of the deserted driveway—the 16-acre estate has been unguarded since the family persuaded all officers to withdraw last night—roared a speeding roadster. It carried Berry Stoll, hatless and with his face denoting great excitement. One man was with him.

Roars Across State.

The car swung south on Lime Kiln lane, bordering the estate, away from the Ohio River and the main highway. Down narrow, winding roads the roadster hurried.

A few miles away, on the Brownsboro road, Stoll changed to a faster car and held his course south. From time to time he was reported by towns on the way to his undisclosed destination.

Somewhere in the Kentucky hills Berry Stoll met the kidnaper or a go-between if implications of his announcement are to be credited. And there he trusted to their faith and handed over $50,000 in currency in exchange for the promise that his wife would be returned.

Stoll was back at his home by 1:15 p. m., four hours after he had driven away.

NRA to Resume Fight On Lumber Firms

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 12 (AP).—Further arguments will be heard tomorrow by Federal Judge John E. Martineau on the NRA's petition for an order to restrain six Arkansas lumber companies from violating the price-fixing provisions of the lumber code.

Judge Martineau, at the conclusion of a hearing today, refused to grant the order, but consented to hear arguments further after William H. Griffin, of Washington member of the legal staff of the NRA, had asked opportunity to present additional evidence.

NRA to Speed Prosecutions Of Chiselers

Justice and Trade Units Will Aid Drive on Offenders.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Plans to speed prosecution of NRA chiselers through closer cooperation between Federal agencies were unfolded yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Earlier, Clay Williams, soft-spoken recovery chief, informed business that there would be "no broad, sweeping changes" in price-fixing policy. He emphasized that the new administrative board would consider all future code changes, industry by industry.

Mr. Roosevelt announced he had abandoned the idea of creating separate judicial machinery for the reshaped NRA. Instead, he explained, the Justice Department, the Federal Trade Commission and NRA will work hand in hand to enforce trade practice provisions.

Closer contact between the three agencies, the President said, should result in quick enforcement and remedy the present situation under which the chiseler goes unmolested for perhaps six months and finds it profitable to violate code provisions despite ultimate prosecution.

NRA, he added, will continue to handle preliminary investigations of failure to abide by codes. An Assistant Attorney General may be assigned to the recovery unit to keep in touch with such cases in their early stages.

Experience has shown, the President pointed out, that about 95 per cent of compliance complaints can be settled without resorting to the courts. He stressed the need for uniformity in handling such cases.

The closely knit enforcement efforts were decided on at a conference between the President, Donald R. Richberg, recovery coordinator; Attorney General Cummings and Garland S. Ferguson, Trade Commission chairman.

Williams heralded to reporters the end of the "glamorous and spectacular" era of NRA under the leadership of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, departing administrator. He smoked one cigarette after another as he told of his plans.

He smiled broadly when asked whether, like Johnson, he would conduct NRA "in a gold-fish bowl."

"We don't intend to do our job under a table," he responded.

"But, of course, this isn't the spectacular or glamorous phase of NRA. There was a definite place for the spectacular and glamorous when NRA was started. That sort of thing was a definite asset then.

"Our task is different. Code making is about completed. We now have a work-a-day job of taking codes set up hurriedly and often experimentally—and I intend no reflection because it was conceded at the time—and studying them under a glass.

"We now hope to have a more deliberative phase. It won't be spectacular. It will be the most work-a-day job we ever stuck our noses into."

Clauses governing price-fixing, production limitation and the length of the work week, Williams declared, will be studied on the basis of their need in separate industries.

"Our guiding star," he said, "will be whether any given provision makes a contribution to recovery."

Williams described compliance as "one of our main problems" and promised every effort would be made to tighten enforcement.

New Teachers For Crittenton

Mrs. Edith Allen to Head Night School Staff at the Home.

Teachers for the night school of the Florence Crittenton Home were announced yesterday when Mrs. Leonard Olree, chairman of the education committee, reported to the board of managers in a meeting at the home.

Mrs. Edith Allen is the principal, with Mrs. Loretta Arrow, sewing teacher; Mrs. Alexander Sturgis, domestic science; Miss Josephine Bay, elementary, and Mrs. Beatrice Jordon, business.

The superintendent of the home, Mrs. Jean S. Cole, reported 50 girls and 32 babies in the home, with 4 babies born during September.

Mrs. William T. Tignor was named by Mrs. J. C. Freeland, chairman of the house committee, to take charge of plans for a luncheon which will follow the annual rally October 26.

Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, president of the organization, presided, while other committee reports were made by Mrs. John Beck, Miss Gladys Phipps, Mrs. G. H. Mitchell, Mrs. Robert Rausth, Mrs. T. F. Jackson, Mrs. Florence T. Bassett, Mrs. A. H. Thompson and Mrs. Earl English.

Guns of Italians Salute Passing Of Funeral Ship

Messina, Italy, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—A salute of 21 guns fired at one-minute intervals, was fired from Italian coast batteries today when the Yugoslavian cruiser Dubrovnik, funeral ship of King Alexander, entered the Straits of Messina.

Twelve Italian warships, flying the Yugoslavian flag, also fired salvos as they met the Dubrovnik and took up the duty of escort, which ended at sunset when the fleet was off the Aeolians.

Crews lining the decks of the Italian vessels stood at salute and shouted "Long live the King," and all Italian merchantmen along the route carried Yugoslavian flags at half-mast.

Descendant of Miles Standish Accused of Violating Wet-Battery Code.

By Raymond Clapper

A DESCENDANT of Miles Standish goes on trial in Federal Court at Scranton, Pa., Monday on a charge that would have made his Puritan forbears who had a law against a man kissing his wife on Sunday, just a little dizzy.

Defendant Fred Perkins is up in Federal Court for violation of the wet battery code. He has ten employes in his battery shop at West York, Pa. The NRA code required him to pay at least 40 cents an hour. He said he couldn't afford it. He says he made $2,531 profit last year and had to put part of it back in the business. His wages average 25 cents an hour.

He was warned by the wet battery code authority in Philadelphia that he was violating the code. Then he was asked to appear in New York for a hearing. Instead he just went about his business. One day a U. S. Marshal walked into his office and took him off to jail—that was on July 14, Bastile Day. Defendant Perkins was lodged in a cell next to a counterfeiter and stayed behind the bars 18 days until a fellow townsman put up the $5,000 bail demanded.

Defendant Perkins is 56 years old, is educating a son, holds a Cornell degree as a mechanical engineer, is a fraternity brother of Donald R. Richberg — Phi Gamma Delta—and he's boiling mad over the Administration's efforts to give him the more abundant life. Monday he can tell it to the judge.

Prof. George F. Warren, the mysterious monetary magician, got his first break in the big time when Mrs. Roosevelt heard him lecture at Cornell University. She and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau were visiting at Cornell and attended one of Warren's talks on prices. They were so impressed that Mrs. Roosevelt spoke to her husband about him. Mr. Roosevelt spoke to her husband about him. Mr. Roosevelt was less impressed, but was willing to give the professor a try. The story is that before Mr. Roosevelt finished, Prof. Warren changed some of his ideas. The fact that he was invited to the White House for luncheon is not understood to mean that he has returned to favor as the No. 1 adviser on monetary policy.

• • • •

His intimates don't like to parallel him with Wilson's leap from Princeton to the White House but that's what they have in mind. Born in Missouri, now a prominent figure in the restless Middle West, a much-sought-after speaker at luncheon clubs and business men's conventions, progressive but not radical, 47 years old last week, ambitious and with a wife who says he will lang in the White House, he will be much talked of between now and 1936.

He is tall, even-featured and cuts a handsome figure at the head table. Women think he's clever and men think he is smart because he bejewels his speeches with Emersonian epigrams. His views will be set forth in a book to appear in a few days, "America's Hour of Decision."

Dr. Frank is opposed to the attempt to create an economy of scarcity by curtailment of production. He favors more goods at lower prices, believes in private enterprise but thinks it must undergo readjustments in line with a new period.

Old-line politicians don't care for his type—smacks too much of Wilson—but he offers something new to a vast body of intelligent persons who, not caring for the New Deal, have no place else to go.

• • • •

All of this adds some significance to the under-cover tussel between President Roosevelt and Dr. Frank over Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board. Garrison is dean of the law school at the University of Wisconsin, and Frank has been demanding that he return to Madison and take over the job. Mr. Roosevelt needs Garrison to carry on the delicate work of the Labor Board. He appealed in vain to Frank for a release, and plainly was displeased when the head of a great State university refused to recognize the Government's need at this time. This has left Frank somewhat on the spot among New Dealers.

The Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger has found the remainder of the speech of the late Chief Justice White from which President Roosevelt quoted in his recent radio talk. The passage quoted by the President said there was danger in the habit, where anything is objected to, of referring to the Constitution as a means of preventing it.

Additional passages dug up by The Ledger took a different slant and warned of a tendency "to be lukewarm concerning attacks upon fundamental and essential constitutional provisions, to take it for granted that they may not be overthrown, when on the contrary the plain duty is to be alert, to defend against the least encroachment, to point out the dangers which must come and thus to keep ever vividly present and quickened in the minds of all the people the necessity of adhering to and upholding the Constitution if they would preserve the heritage of liberty which they have received."

New Inflation Reports Draw Quick Denials

tended more jugglery of the dollar. One Treasury authority remarked sadly that Prof. Warren's ill-timed visit to the White House had cost about $16,000,000—although just what this meant was never explained.

And from Capital Hill, Senator Lewis, who is still proud to be known as the exquisite of the Senate, issued a categorical denial in his capacity as chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee.

Misunderstood.

"My good friend Senator Bulkley is an eminent Senator and a distinguished member of the Banking and Currency Committee," explained Senator Lewis, "but I am sure he was misunderstood if he left the impression that the President favors a further devaluation of the dollar, either as to gold content or as to any manner of inflation.

"I was in full conference with the President yesterday at the White House, where I was reporting to him as chairman of the Senate Committee for the Election of Democratic Senators the situation in different States as I saw it, while speaking through the States and in conferences with business leaders.

"The coming election would be greatly disturbed in business circles if there was a belief that the President calculated further changes in the value of the American dollar or any inflation by the issue of greenbacks or printing press money to meet the debt of the Government.

"I can assure the public nothing of such kind is under any contemplation."

Late in the day, the causes of much of the revived inflation talk, Senator Bulkley and Prof. Warren met for what both took care to describe as merely a "chat." By no stretch of the imagination was there a wisp of news in their conversation, they insisted. For the moment the recurrent ghost of money magic was again receding—to the relief of all the orthodox.

Boettcher Kidnap Witness' Shooting Is Probed by U. S.

Denver, Oct. 12 (AP).—Federal Department of Justice agents joined police today in investigating the fatal shooting of Roy T. Gibbs, whose life had been threatened because of information he gave in the Boettcher kidnaping case.

Gibbs, 28, was shot to death when his revolver was discharged as his car overturned in a mountain canon near Estes Park. He and John Hammond, also 28, were deer hunting.

Gibbs' death occurred just a few days before the scheduled trial of Mrs. Ruth Kohler, his mother-in-law, and Mrs. Verne Sankey, widow of the kidnap gang leader, on charges of conspiracy to kidnap in connection with the Boettcher abduction. Federal officials said Gibbs was to have been a witness at the trial.

Hammond said Gibbs, driving the car, lost control when he reached for a revolver to shoot at a fox. Hammond, who was unhurt, was questioned by police and Federal agents.

Gibbs was related by marriage to Sankey, leader of the gang that kidnaped Charles Boettcher 2d, Denver broker. As a result of information he supplied Federal agents who arrested Sankey, Gibbs received $8,137 of the $25,000 reward Boettcher's father offered for information concerning the identity of the kidnapers.

Boys' Dates 25 Cents; Coeds Free.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 12 (AP).—University of Tennessee boys can now get a date for a quarter. Coeds can get dates without cost.

Miss Marion Robinson, university senior from Knoxville, announced today the opening of a "date bureau" at the university.

Students wishing dates, Miss Robinson said, will file their applications along with a description of themselves. Miss Robinson then sorts them out into the "best fitted couples" and arranges the date.

"This bureau is to aid the students in meeting and knowing each other," Miss Robinson said.

Showdown in Court Set for Hauptmann

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 12 (AP).—New Jersey officials were confident today that Bruno Richard Hauptmann, tight-lipped German carpenter, would be forced to show his hand Monday, when he resists a move to extradite him to this State to stand trial as the murderer of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz said the "burden of proof" at the habeas corpus hearing in New York Supreme Court would be upon Hauptmann, who, he said, must show "by almost conclusive evidence" he was not in New Jersey the night of the crime, March 1, 1932.

James M. Fawcett, counsel for Hauptmann, has announced he will call 15 witnesses, among them Hauptmann's wife, to testify that the war-time German machine gunner could not have committed the crime.

Wilentz, his legal aids, Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., of Hunterdon, and Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, State police superintendent, mapped New Jersey's case today, but declined to reveal it before Hauptmann's alibi is officially in the record.

"The witnesses we will call," Wilentz said, "will depend on whom they call. I can't reveal now how many we have."

In reply to direct questions, he refused to say whether Col. Charles A. Lindbergh or Dr. John F. Condon, the intermediary who paid $50,000 ransom in vain, would be witnesses.

Meanwhile, a new State witness, Frank Rossiter, of Maplewood entered the case amid considerable secrecy.

Neither Wilentz nor Schwarzkopf would discuss Rossiter's connection with the case, nor the significance of his testimony. Rossiter, who testified before the Hunterdon County grand jury last Monday, is reported to have talked to Hauptmann for approximately ten minutes in a "well-lighted place" near Hopewell. The time of the conversation was not disclosed.

Rail Counsel Opens Attack On Pension Act

Tells Court Lines Are Unable to Assume New Burdens.

E. A. McInnis, general counsel for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Co., yesterday began the closing argument for the Nation's railroads in their attempt to have the recently enacted railroad retirement act declared unconstitutional.

Before Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, in the District Supreme Court, McInnis began his assault upon the measure yesterday morning and had not concluded his argument when court adjourned late in the day. He will continue Monday.

The carriers, claiming they will be called upon to pay approximately $60,000,000 a year for the first five years of the act's duration, with gradually increasing amounts annually thereafter, contend they are not in a position to assume additional financial burdens at this time.

They charge the act is invalid because it seeks Federal regulation of employes who are not engaged in interstate commerce and included vast numbers of employes whose services will be lost through automatic retirement. They have termed the act "a social experiment" at their expense.

Countering claims by Hammond Chaffets, special assistant to the Attorney General, described the act as a valid attempt by the Federal Government to regulate interstate commerce through the promotion of old-age retirement and the automatic pensioning of superannuated employes.

In the only flurry between counsel yesterday, Chief Justice Wheat expressed the tentative opinion that the retirement of aged employes would seem a proper regulation.

Heat Fells 400 At Catholic Rite In Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, Oct. 12 (AP).—Under a broiling spring sun, a half million Roman Catholics assembled today for the pontifical high mass.

So terrific was the heat in the open-air cathedral that 400 women and girls collapsed. Laymen and priests alike were permitted to cover their heads against the sun.

Palermo Park, the huge tract on the Rio de la Plata, was crowded far beyond the 250,000 seats erected for the thirty-second international Eucharistic Congress. The congregation converged at the 105-foot cross in the center of Avenida Alvear.

Bishop Orihuelay, of Alcante, Spain, officiated at the mass in place of the cardinal legate, Eugenio Pacelli, who officially opened the recently constructed Church of Santa Rosa de Lima.

As the congregation, swelled by the Columbus Day holiday and additional pilgrims from the interior, took their places, the choir of 500 sang. United States Ambassador and Mrs. Alexander W. Weddell were in the diplomatic box.

The commemorative ceremony of the sacrifice began after the arrival of Cardinals Verdier and Hlond.

Boy Falls From Tree Trying to Save Kitten

A frightened kitten perched high in a tree yesterday brought bad luck to Norman Jackson, 12, colored, of 89 Myrtle street northeast.

The youth climbed the tree near his home to rescue the kitten. A dead branch broke and he fell to the ground.

The boy was removed to Casualty Hospital where it was said his injuries included back and head injuries and a broken left wrist.

Treasury Calls $1,870,000,000 Issue of Bonds

no further monetary experimentation in prospect.

On the other hand, it was pointed out that the policy of refunding the Fourth Liberties into lower interest-bearing securities was inaugurated in October a year ago, a week before the President's announcement that the Treasury would start buying gold under the Warren commodity dollar scheme of raising prices. This announcement was the forerunner of the gold devaluation program.

The announcement of a year ago, however, differed in one important aspect from that made yesterday. On that occasion the Treasury not only called $1,880,000,000 of the Fourth Liberties for redemption as of April 15 last, but also offered to convert the called bonds immediately into a security bearing an interest rate of 4¼ per cent for one year and 3¼ per cent thereafter.

Calls to Date.

So far the Treasury has called $4,900,000,000 of the 4¼ per cent Fourth Liberties, leaving outstanding and uncalled approximately $1,300,000,000 of these bonds. It is now expected that this residue of the issue which originally totaled $6,900,000,000, but was reduced to $6,268,000,000 through retirements a year ago, will be called next April for redemption on October 15, 1935.

Thus in two years the Treasury will have converted the total 4¼ per cent Fourth Liberty issue, clipping, at the present rate of conversion, more than 1 per cent off the interest rate. On the total issue a reduction of 1 per cent in the interest rate means an annual saving of $62,680,000 for the Treasury when the refunding operation is completed.

The Treasury will not benefit substantially from these reductions in interest until next Monday, because in the conversion carried out a year ago bonds were given bearing a 4¼ per cent for one year.

Of the $3,030,000,000 Fourth Liberties called a year ago and last April the holders of $2,750,000,000 of the securities took advantage of the conversion option while holders of $380,000,000 of the bonds asked for cash payment. The latter were or will be paid off with money borrowed on short-term obligations bearing interest rates of less than 3 per cent.

This refunding operation compares favorably with the gigantic operation conducted several years ago by the British government when $10,000,000,000 in 5 per cent war bonds were converted into 3½ per cent securities. Mr. Roosevelt, in his fireside chat to the Nation two weeks ago, paid high tribute to the British government for that action.

So far all Fourth 4¼ per cent Liberty bonds with serial numbers ending in the digits 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 0 have been called, leaving uncalled only those bonds with serial numbers ending in the digits 3 and 4.

Stock Findings Ask No New Laws

Pecora, swarthy committee counsel, to National prominence and into a seat on the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission, was estimated at $250,000. The committee was quick to insist, however, that the Government "has been, or will be, reimbursed many times over by the receipt of additional income taxes and penalties imposed on the basis of testimony developed at the hearings."

While avoiding specific legislative proposals, the report enumerated what it called "vital matters" that "remain for our immediate consideration."

Management First.

First among these was listed "conduct and management of banking institutions, such as truthful and adequate financial statements, nature and diversification of loans and security, proper banking reserves, trust function of banks, effective governmental examination of books, employment of bank examiners, window-dressing activities of banking officers, and other similar problems."

Further "meriting immediate consideration and action," the committee reported, are phases of investment trust and holding company operation.

When used for diversification of investments with a view to investment return rather than capital appreciation, the committee conceded the investment trust "may have a place in our investment system."

"The facility of perverted uses of these companies requires that these trusts be circumscribed with protective safeguards," the 400-page report concluded, however.

A broad field of possible Federal intervention in the investment trust field was suggested, as follows:

"The record indicates that it may be necessary to simplify the capital structure of investment trusts to prevent the organizers from usurping control and a disproportionate part of the equity and yield of these trusts; to limit and prescribe the concentration of securities in a particular industry; to prevent the diversion of these trusts from their normal channels of diversified investment to the abnormal avenues of control of industry; to prohibit pyramiding of investment trusts; to completely divorce investment trusts from investment banking; to eliminate the conflict of interest between investment managers and the public; to compel full and complete disclosure of the organization, capital structure, and management of the conduct of investment trusts."

The report assailed holding companies "serving no productive function, but organized merely to pervert the use of controlled companies and evade their legal limitations." Such were branded "detrimental to the public welfare."

Utility the Factor.

"The magnitude of a corporation is no justification for its existence or propagation, nor reason for its abolition or curtailment," the committee said. "The determinative factor is social and economic utility."

Chairman Fletcher declared the inquiry was conducted "without animus" and members were "actuated by a genuine desire to be helpful in solving our economic difficulties."

Discussing the recent course of legislation the report said three major principles already have been dealt with legislatively—"the separation of monetary policy from banking, the creation of deposits insurance and the separation of investment banking and the securities business from commercial banking."

"The securities act of 1933 and the securities exchange act of 1934 have vested in the Securities and Exchange Commission jurisdiction over the source of and the traffic in securities," the report read.

"The vigilant administration of these acts should materially abate, if not eradicate, abuses that have caused much economic distress. The establishment of an honest and true securities market is dependent upon the effective enforcement of the legislative mandates in these acts."

Communists Routed.

The asserted communistic element went down to defeat repeatedly when delegates yelled demands at Green to put the various questions to a vote. A few of their proposals were accepted, most of them after modification.

An attack on the Senate munitions investigation was launched by Rudolph di Capio, of San Pedro, Calif., who asserted "We will soon be in a war solely for the profits of employers." He charged the munitions makers had brought about a recess of the Senate committee until after the fall elections.

The convention then approved a resolution asking continuance of the munitions inquiry.

Last year's convention stand asking the executive council to make efforts toward obtaining unconditional freedom for Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings, convicted San Francisco Preparedness Day parade bombers, was reaffirmed.

The federation also reaffirmed previous action favoring repeal of criminal syndicalism laws.

Plot on Royalty Charged to Ring minister denied any such organization existed in Hungary).

This organization—heretofore active in Yugoslavia, but with ramifications stretcking into all nations of the continent—sent men out to commit bomb outrages against individuals and trains in Yugoslavia, the police said.

Had Kalemen failed at Marseille, authorities said they believed attempts would have been made to wreck the King's train between Marseille and Lyon or at Fontainebleau, the apparent forest lair of the terrorists.

If those efforts were not successful, bombs would have been used in Paris, the police stated.

Silence at first met the Annemasse questioners. The modified "third degree," through which Ivan Rajtich and Novak passed, allowed them no sleep last night.

Difficulties in identifying Kalemen extended to every one of the three men thus far arrested as his suspected accomplices. Investigators found it almost impossible to pierce the maze of forged passports, assumed names, mixed nationalities and false birthplaces with which the men shrouded their identities.

"God Directs Me."

Novak, before admitting his real name, had told his questioners he would never reveal his true identity "since it would mean my death." Asked who directed his activities, he had said "God directs me."

In revealing its belief that an international ring staged the Marseille assassinations, the Surete Nationale emphasized there was no evidence to implicate any foreign country in the crime.

"We are still seeking to determine the real identity of Kalemen, Rajtich and others mentioned in the investigation, their political affiliations and who their accomplices were, for they certainly had accomplices," officials said.

A high authority said, "We are under the impression that the suspects will guard their secret. They seem ready to sacrifice their lives rather than betray the sinister organization to which they belong."

Latvian Prelate Found Murdered

Was to Have Testified in Embezzlement Trial.

Riga, Latvia, Oct. 12 (AP).—Archbishop Johann Pommer, primate of the Greek Orthodox Church in Latvia, was brutally slain today a few hours before he was to have testified as chief witness in a case involving embezzlement of church funds.

The assassins attempted to destroy traces of the crime by burning the body. The torn form of the churchman was found on a carpenter's bench in a part of his suburban villa used for storing tools.

Investigators believed personal rather than political enmity was the moving force in the crime, and attached little importance to his bitterness toward Communism. The primate had been a member of the Latvian Parliament since 1925 and was floor leader of the Orthodox party.

Housemaids Few But Hopkins Says He's Not to Blame

Harry L. Hopkins, the Relief Administrator, declined yesterday to shoulder the blame for a reported scarcity of maid servants, the Associated Press reports.

Reporters asked if it was true that many maids preferred relief payments to jobs.

"I think this is the way that probably got started," replied Hopkins: "Someone calls up and can't get a maid, with just the right colored eyes, to go to work next morning. So the next day she tells someone else, 'this relief is ridiculous—you can't get a maid to work at all any more.'" ber 15 and allow for a new review of the facts by an impartial committee to be named by the recovery board.

The board chose Willard E. Hotchkiss, chairman of NRA's general code authority; W. Jett Lauck, Washington labor attorney, and Donald M. Nelson, official of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and a member of the NRA industrial advisory board. Their report was unanimous, it was said.

"The reason for making the order effective on December 1," the White House summary of the report said, "was that this would give the industry time to prepare for the change and would not break into the middle of its fall production schedule. * * *

"The committee expressed the opinion (it continued) that the increase in labor costs would not cause any great increase in the price of merchandise, but that this probably would amount to no more than a 5 per cent jump in the cost of a 48-cent work shirt.

"Shortening of work hours was deemed especially desirable by the committee, in view of the fact that competing industries, such as dress and men's clothing manufacturers, are already on the 36-hour week, with generally higher wage scales."

The hour reduction in the cotton garment industry will open up 10,000 more jobs, according to estimates by the NRA. As weekly wages are to be kept at present levels, piece rates must be increased 10 per cent to meet requirements.

Of much more importance to business, however, was the fact that the original order, which had been regarded as arbitrary, was withdrawn to permit conciliation and an impartial survey. The first order provoked considerable alarm in some quarters over Administration intentions.

New White House Offices Ready Soon

Roosevelt Will 'Move In' After Vacation.

President Roosevelt will return from his Thanksgiving vacation at Warm Springs, Ga., to find his new Executive office building completed, it was learned yesterday.

So rapid has construction proceeded that, according to Lorenzo S. Winslow, architect for the building, it will be virtually finished the first of next month. The remodeling has been rushed along on a 24-hour basis ever since it was begun August 1. Work is now centering on the interior, with plastering under way and cork floors to be started next week.

Mr. Winslow, an official of the National Park Service, also was architect for the White House swimming pool put in last year. Eric Gugler is consulting architect for the Executive offices.

mony of Mrs. Whitney's witnesses—former servants of Mrs. Vanderbilt—brought Lady Furness hurrying from Paris.

"Do you think your sister should have charge of Gloria?" she was asked.

"Certainly she should," she replied. "Every child should be with its mother.

"My sister is a better mother than our own mother. She at least does not turn against her children as our mother has."

Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, mother of Lady Furness and Mrs. Vanderbilt, testified for Mrs. Whitney. Though insisting that she loved her daughters, she pronounced Mrs. Vanderbilt lacking in maternal affection and said little Gloria was treated like a "poor orphan."

"I am amazed at my mother's attitude," Lady Furness asserted. "I have no idea what she is doing. She must be overawed."

"Overawed by what?" Lady Furness was asked.

"Oh, just overawed."

"I think so, too," drawled her brother, Harry Hays Morgan, who, with his wife, had accomapnied Lady Furness on the journey to aid their sister.

"I'd like to see anyone try to take a baby away from me!" Lady Furness added.

Lady Furness carried a detective novel with a bright blue cover. With her present residence in Paris she has also acquired a French accent.

Two cars ahead on the same train was Theobald Mathew, an English lawyer, representing the Marchioness of Milford Haven. Lady Milford Haven was mentioned by one of the servant witnesses as having been involved in an incident with Mrs. Vanderbilt. It was this testimony which caused Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew to bar both press and public from further sessions of the trial.

The hearing on Mrs. Vanderbilt's habeas corpus writ will be resumed Monday.

Missionaries Held; $138,500 Asked

Former U. S. Woman Is Captive of Chinese.

Shanghai, Oct. 12 (AP).—The captors of three missionaries, including a woman who formerly lived in the United States, demanded ransom of $500,000 Mexican (about $138,500) today, is was revealed at the local station of the China Inland Mission, to which the three were attached. There is no possibility that this sum will be paid, it was indicated.

The victims were seized Tuesday when returning from a conference at Kweichow. Miss Grace Emblen, a British subject, who once lived at Altoona, Pa.; a British and a Swiss missionary, were taken, but wives of the two men were allowed to return to Kweichow.

Nearly all foreign missions in China have adopted a policy of refusing to meet ransom demands, regardless of the sum, because of the widespread activity of bandit kidnapers.

over the up-and-down brush course, Lord Johnson jumped into the lead over the rapidly tiring Whitney horse. On the third jump, the Clark entry made a forced landing and the ultimate winner tore from third position past Old Bachelor as Luckite roared at his heels.

Willie Hunt, professional rider, who was atop Luckite, entered a claim of foul after the race, but the judges disallowed the claim.

Somewhere in the shuffle, Poppyman and Bagatelle fell by the wayside, as did Lord Johnson. The winner's time of 6:06 was 1 second under the course record, established last year by Mrs. Frank M. Gould's Daniel Soot.

Jock Whitney, who made a spectacular entrance into Llangollen yesterday by cracking up his brand-new plane, was on hand to croon the races into the public address system microphone. Jock was adorned by a bandage over his left eye, his only memento of yesterday's crash.

Easter Hero, which ran second in the Aintree Grand National in 1929, chafed at the bit in the beautiful Whitney "horseshoe stable" as the races were being run. Easter Hero finished second in the English classic with a badly twisted shoe, which now is mounted outside his stall.

The brush jumps, which ordinarily are only 4 feet 9 inches, had been brushed up to 4 feet 11 inches. Andy Ferguson, stable major domo to the Whitneys and clerk of the course for today's meet, was responsible for this added hazard.

A Floating Brewery For Thirsty Alaskans

Seattle, Oct. 12 (AP).—A floating brewery is being built here today to carry schooners of suds to the sourdoughs of Alaska. Beer will be bottled and barreled aboard the old schooner Alumnus as she sails along the southern coast of Alaska.

Alaska has been lacking supplies of beer ever since repeal, for the malt beverage is too bulky to be transported easily in any considerable quantities.

Death was caused by drowning, the coroner stated. He said a heart attack caused the 70-year-old man to keel over into the river. Dr. Merriam was rescued from the water by his companion, Dr. Walter G. Eisinger, of 1117 Vermont avenue northwest. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Joseph M. Becker of Emergency Hospital.

Grieving Slavs Await Arrival Of King's Body

New Rioting Is Denied, Government Bars Italian Slights.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Oct. 12.—Yugoslavia put on her most somber dress tonight to receive her slain king, Alexander I, and greet her new boy king, Peter II.

Alexander's body, brought back from Marseille over the Mediterranean, will arrive at Split, on the Dalmatian coast, Sunday.

Eleven-year-old Peter, taken suddenly from school in England to ascend the throne, is en route back to Belgrade by train from Paris. He is accompanied by his widowed mother, Queen Marie.

Belgrade and all the country's large cities were masses of crepe tonight. Lithographs of the late king and other emblems of sorrow were widely distributed.

Not since the death of King Peter the Liberator, Alexander's father and the Serbs' national hero, has there been such universal mourning.

The nation was calm. Reports of new riots against Italians published abroad proved false. Not even troops were visible.

Foreign diplomats were confident the army gendarmerie built up by Alexander in the last 15 years would maintain order.

The anti-Italian demonstrations at Sarajevo yesterday and at Ljubljana Tuesday night were not swallowed by others, telephone calls to various points in Yugoslavia revealed.

Zivojin Lazic, minister of interior, called reports of serious riots today "pure inventions," admitting "there is considerable feeling against Italians," he asserted this sentiment "certainly has not taken the form of open demonstrations in the streets."

He said the government had given "the strictest instructions to authorities throughout Yugoslavia to prevent the slightest untoward attack against our neighbor, Italy."

Traffic Offenses To Meet Action

Habitual Offenders to Face Loss of Licenses.

Action will be taken by the police and traffic safety committee against habitual traffic offenders reported by the secret committee of 100, it was announced yesterday.

When records of complaints show two or more offenses, the motorists cited will be required to appear before the Board of Revocation and Review to show good reason why their driving permits should not be revoked.

Episcopal Convention Urged Here for 1937

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 12 (Spl.). Sentiment is growing in the fifty-first triennium of the Episcopal Church to bring the 1937 general convention to Washington. The delegation from that diocese is not responsible for this development, but it is springing up here and there in the delegations of both houses. The diocese actively contending for this honor is Denver, which wants to repeat its general convention of 1931.

The last general convention in Washington was in 1928 and many of the delegates appear to feel that in 1937 it will be time to return to the National Capital. A committee will be appointed shortly to consider the place of meeting for 1937 and then proponents for the various cities interested will be heard and recommendation made to the convention.

Ways and means of creating an archbishop of Washington when the time comes were outlined in a report on the status of the presiding bishop read to the house of deputies this morning. It was the result of the study of a commission appointed in Denver three years ago. In case the present triennium should decide that the presiding bishop should become archbishop of Washington the survey outlined the method and the necessary steps to be taken. In the report which was presented by the Rev. Stanley C. Hughes of Newport, R. I., for Bishop Perry the term of office of the presiding bishop would be changed from six years to the time he reached his sixty-eighth year. It would be arranged that on being elected presiding bishop a bishop should relinquish his own see and assume control of a primatial see provided through the cession of a part of its territory by some diocese or a concordat with some small diocese whereby it would cede to the general convention its right to elect its own bishop and accept the presiding bishop.

There still remains small chance that the Archbishop of Washington idea will be realized at this general convention. But action on the status of the presiding bishop will open the way for future general conventions to bring the matter to a decision.

Recovery Act Praised.

It was also suggested in the report that the name "presiding bishop" should remain for some time longer and attention was called to the fact that the presiding bishop is already "primate and metropolitan, and no title can make him more so."

A memorial introduced at the convention today stated "The National recovery act assumes the organization of workers and the organization of employers and attempts to give rules for the industrial game; it places the Government as the umpire or referee between them. This is a step in advance and the gains should be made permanent. We can not go back to pre-NRA days, either the NRA or some improvement of its methods will implant the mutual interests of the two groups and promote brotherhood. No arrangement, however, will produce industrial peace, only a new spirit on the part of the entire community will do that. Here is where we believe our religion of fraternity, based on the divine fatherhood, has a magnificent opportunity."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will be the principal speaker at the conference for young people which will occupy the attention of the deputies and the young peoples' organizations of the church Sunday. Bishop Freeman is a constant advocate of the inherent good in modern youth, despite many attacks, and a frequent speaker to groups of young people in colleges, as well as churches, and his address is awaited with great interest here.

The Rev. Dr. George Fiske Dudley, rector of Saint Stephens and Incarnation Parish and a member delegate from the diocese of Washington, was appointed a member of the committee on amendments to the constitution by the Rev. Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, of Washington, president of the house of deputies, yesterday.

Houghton to Preside.

In the upper South Carolina delegation sits a young clergyman, the Rev. Capers Satterlee, who is a near relative of the Right Rev. Henry Yates Satterlee, first bishop of Washington.

Former Ambassador to Great Britain Alanson B. Houghton will preside over the luncheon of the National Cathedral Association of Washington Cathedral on Monday.

More than 60 persons have accepted for the luncheon. Mrs. William Adams Brown, honorary chairman of the women's committee of Washington Cathedral, will be among the speakers. Bishop Freeman and former United States Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, will speak.

In the general church program announced yesterday, the quota for the diocese of Washington for 1934, was set at $55,000 with a quota of $33,500 for 1935.

The quotas to be raised by other dioceses in this territory are as follows: Maryland, 1934, $79,000; 1935, $49,000; Virginia, 1934, $45,500; 1935, $27,500; West Virginia, 1934, $19,500; 1935, $12,000; southern Virginia, 1934, $30,000, 1935, $17,500; southwestern Virginia, 1934, $17,000; 1935, $10,500.

The total budget proposed for the entire church activities for 1935 is $2,700,000.

Maryland G. O. P. Candidate Faces Fight Over Eligibility

Residence in Frederick County Must Be Proved by Joseph R. Harp.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Eligibility of Joseph R. Harp, Myersville, one of the five Republican nominees for the House of Delegates, as a voter has been challenged and he will be required to appear before the election officials in Jackson district next Tuesday, revision day, to show cause why his name should not be stricken from the registration books and also to substantiate his claim that he is a resident of Frederick County.

Republican leaders blame a disgruntled candidate, defeated for the nomination at the recent primary election, for the efforts to disqualify Harp. In the event Harp is not successful in proving that he is a bonafide resident of the county before the registration officials the case will be taken to the Circuit Court, it was stated last night. Decision against Harp would create a vacancy which under the usual proceedings would be filled by the county central committee.

Republican leaders indicated that they will stand behind Harp and are of the opinion that when he presents proof of his residence in this county his name will be kept on the books. Harp claims that while he has been giving music lessons in a nearby section of Pennsylvania he has retained his residence in Jackson District. Workers of both parties have been checking the registration books since the final registration last week in an effort to weed out voters believed to be disqualified.

The hunt then turned to the vicinity of Moberly, Mo., after Mrs. Ed Ginther reported three men stopped at her farm about noon and asked for a towel and soap, explaining that one of their companions had cut his finger on a car door. The man who used the soap and towel drew from his pocket a .32 and a .38 caliber cartridge and asked if she had any weapons they would fit, Mrs. Ginther said.

The trio appeared nervous, Mrs. Ginther said, and sped toward Cairo, six miles north of Moberly, after reentering their car.

About an hour later, the Iowa State Bureau of Investigation announced a man said to resemble Floyd was reported to have left Leon, Iowa, about 1 p. m. and headed south toward Lamoni, Iowa, and the Missouri line.

The bureau said the report came from Rich Anderson, an investigator for the Iowa Liquor Commission, who was working in southern Iowa.

A garage owner said the man handed him five $100 bills with which to pay for a new motor car. When the car dealer examined the money, he said the man left the garage, walked down the street to his parked car and drove south toward Lamoni.

Accused of Killings.

Floyd's brush with the Iowa officers yesterday occurred just a day after the Department of Justice named him, Richetti and Verne Miller as the actual slayers in the Union Station quintuple slaying. Miller was killed last November, apparently by gangsters.

The Federal Government pushed ahead for early prosecution of others implicated in the Union Station killings, which followed an attempt to liberate Frank Nash, escaped Federal prisoner who was being returned to prison at Leavenworth, Kans.

Vivian Mathias, who also was known as Mrs. Verne Miller, was arraigned here today on charges of conspiring to release a Federal prisoner, and held under $25,000 bond.

A subpena was issued today for the appearance of Joe Lusco, north side Kansas City politician, before the Federal grand jury which has been called to meet October 21 to return indictments against those implicated in the Union Station gun battle.

Daddy Browning Dies, Sunshine Girl at Side

Real Estate Operator, Long Ill, Leaves Estate Estimated at $6,000,000 to $7,000,000; No Bequest Made to 'Peaches.'

Scarsdale, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP).—Edward West Browning, the "Daddy" Browning of turbulent romances and sensational court squabbles, died today after a long illness.

Typical of the night life of the toddling 20's, a lavish spender with a flair for the spotlight, Browning reached his fullest measure of publicity in 1925 to 1927—his courtship of Frances "Peaches" Heenan, their sudden marriage and quick separation.

That no bequest was included for "Peaches" in Browning's will was indicated by his general counsel, Victor K. Ross, who estimated the value of the estate at $6,000,000 to $7,000,000.

Could Claim Share.

"Peaches" could claim a widow's dower right of a third of the income from Browning's $500,000 personal estate, Ross said. He declined to disclose the present net return, if any, from this source.

Despite the fantastic twist of his life before the public eye, Browning was keen-minded and able in business.

A native New Yorker, son of Edward Franklin Browning and descendant of an old Colonial family, Browning started in the real estate business soon after reaching his majotrity. From the first, he specialized in West Side properties and made millions in the development of upper Broadway, Riverside drive and West End avenue.

It was fitting that Browning's business life, too, was tied up with Broadway. He was known as one of the gayest habitues of the "Great White Way."

In 1915, he walked into a Bronx real estate office, met pretty Nellie Adele Lowden. After a brief wooing, they were wed.

They lived in one of the first penthouses, a 24-room affair. The furnishings cost something like $250,000, and the place boasted a miniature lake and a reproduction of Babylon's hanging gardens.

Divorced in 1924.

They were divorced in 1924. "Daddy" was given custody of one of their two adopted daughters, Dorothy Sunshine Browning, now Mrs. Clarence B. Hood.

The next year, he advertised his desire to adopt another girl as companion for Dorothy. Thousands of applicants were sifted down to Mary Louise Spas, who said she was 16. Later, it developed she was 21 and the adoption was cancelled.

Late in 1925, "Daddy" met "Peaches" at a party. She was 15.

Almost nightly, they were seen along Broadway. "Peaches'" father was dead. But her mother beamed approval.

Amid a full glare of publicity, they were married. He called her his "Cinderella girl." But the hour of midnight came quickly for this modern-day Cinderella.

Will to Settle Point.

Browning won the separation suit. 'Peaches" lost a counter-suit for $500,000 damage, in which she charged him with immorality and declared he virtually made a prisoner of her. With it, she lost a demand for $300 a week alimony, the court saying she obviously was more interested in the money than in a separation, else she would have sued for an annulment.

In 1929, "Peaches" won a decision on her dower rights. This was never made public and the will of the real estate operator is awaited to settle this point.

Life, in recent years, was more or less average for Browning. A few months ago, he startled photographers by declining to pose for them. Gone from his office were the thousands of letters, always on exhibit, from marriageable and adoptable girls — who wanted to take the place of "Peaches."

His heart weakened, his condition made the more serious by a cerebral hemorrhage, he was taken to a house leased in Scarsdale a month ago. Double pneumonia hastened his death.

Movie Duelist Spears Himself a Divorce Suit

Hollywood, Oct. 12 (AP).—When Le Roy Prinz, film dance director, returned home in the early morning with saber wounds on his chest, it appears they were not viewed as a badge of honor by his wife, Mrs. Agnes Printz filed suit for divorce.

"He had a penchant for practicing dueling and saber fighting," the woman's divorce complaint set forth.

Princess Discards Husband's Name And Own Title

Mineola, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP).—Xenia Leeds, Princess Xenia of Russia and Mrs. William B. Leeds are no more.

The divorced wife of the tin plate king is to be known in the future simply as Miss Xenia Romanoff. She obtained a court ruling granting her permission to resume her maiden name yesterday.

The daughter of the late Grand Duke George of Russia in her petition asking she be allowed to use her family name said the profusion of names created a "situation of great inconvenience" and she desired "to assume my family name in order to avoid confusion of identity and any question of legality of the name by which I am now known."

Poison Suspect Takes Refuge In Kin's Home

E.C. Bell Moves From Wife He Is Charged With Trying to Kill.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—E. C. Bell, prominent merchant accused of poisoning his invalid wife, moved from his home last night to that of his brother, W. A. Bell, where he will reside until preliminary hearing on the charges November 8.

The accused man made the change after Albert V. Bryant, prosecuting attorney, declared it "unwise and improper" for Mr. Bell to remain in the same house with his wife.

Mr. Bell continued his assertions of innocence to friends today, although Bryant reiterated his prediction of a conviction.

First news of the asserted poisoning was made known to Mrs. Bell last night. Members of the family said she took the disclosures calmly.

Contrary to first reports, E. C. Bell, jr., son of the accused man, knew nothing of the case until after his father's arrest, and was not instrumental in discovering the alleged poisoning, it was said. Laboratory analysis of Mrs. Bell's food was made in Richmond at the instigation of physicians.

Prosecution witnesses at the trial are expected to be Dr. John E. Cole, Mrs. Bell's physician; the two nurses, Mrs. W. A. Jones and Miss Ruth Hill, and Rebecca Burrus, colored cook.

Miss La Verne went on the stage as a child. At 14 she played Lady Macbeth and Juliet. She was born in 1872, near Memphis, Tenn.

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 12 (AP).—First steps toward elimination of its rule limiting pastors' tenures to seven years was taken today by the quadrennial general conference of the Evangelical Church.

The conference voted almost unanimously to remove the seven year limitation. The action was taken after memorials requesting such action were reported favorably by the committee on revision of church law.

Salary Is Mystery Even to Chairman Of New NRA Body

Inquisitive reporters were left in the dark yesterday when they sought to solve the biggest mystery of the new NRA—the salaries of the board members.

Clay Williams, aggressive chairman, grinned and confessed he, too, was baffled.

"I haven't heard anything about salaries yet," he said.

Nor could he supply the answer when asked whether he would ride in the official automobile formerly used by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, retiring administrator.

Virginia to Aid Parkway Plan

Byrd Says State Will Give Land Control if Possible.

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, said yesterday he had advised Secretary Ickes that Virginia would furnish the Government wherever possible with control of a 1,000-foot strip for the Shenandoah-Great Smoky Mountains Parkway, the Associated Press stated.

Ickes asked Virginia for full title to a 200-foot right of way and for a "scenic easement" on 400-foot strips on either side of the right of way.

Such an easement would give the Secretary authority to pass upon the erection of any object on the land that might interfere with scenery.

Byrd said the easements now are being obtained where possible by Henry G. Shirley, Virginia highway commissioner.

Fear of Future Is Unjustified, Says Dickinson

Commerce Office Aid Tells Annapolis Audience Cure Takes Time.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—"Criticism of the Recovery Program can be sifted down to two things, the fact that recovery is not moving fast enough to suit everybody, and the unjustified fear of the future," John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said here tonight.

The statement was made by Mr. Dickinson during his speech in the Statehouse before several hundred residents of Annapolis and Anna Arundel County at a mass meeting climaxing the NRA campaign here during which Blue Eagle posters were distributed.

Considering the two criticisms of the recovery program, Mr. Dickinson told his audience that "it should be clear and evident to all of us that the cure generally takes as much or more time than is required for the infection of the disease which brings about the illness. The Nation has been gradually growing ill over a period of years. It is the recovery idea to cure the illness by building up the economic body not only for the present but for continued sound health. Time is required."

The speaker pointed out that a comparison of profits made on 250 industrial corporations during the first half of 1934 and the first half of 1933 showed that the total for the latter period was $86,362,000, while the same total for the first half of 1934 was $276,563,000, or a gain of 220 per cent.

Mr. Dickinson pointed out, according to his interpretation, a phase in the recovery program where business could make a constructive contribution. He said in this connection:

"Natural opposition has developed to something generally termed 'price fixing.' The past has shown that a depression can not be cured merely by raising prices. But there is a difference and a distinction between fair trade practices and that condition which is becoming misconstrued with price fixing. Condemnation of one does not justify condemnation of the other. Fair trade practices are not secretive agreements such as might go with the general interpretation of price fixing. It is not fair to permit the occasionally dreaded phrase of 'price fixing' to convict fair trade practices, which are considerably different if properly analyzed as they should be."

Alcohol Board Tells Drinkers Just What Rum Is

What a drinker drinks when he orders a drink—if it's rum—was defined yesterday by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

Rum, the administration said in issuing tentative regulations, is the distillate obtained solely from the fermented juice of sugar cane sugar cane molasses or other sugar cane by-products. The distillate should have the "taste, aroma, chatracteristics and chemical composition generally attributed to rum and known to the trade as such."

It was also ruled that such a product could be designated by geographical names if it was produced according to laws and regulations of the place of production.

Vendor Sees Dim Shadows But Senses Color and Beauty

Victim of Fading Vision Keeps Cheery Outlook Running News Stand.

Frank Hodges lives in a world of shadows, a world of black and grays, a world of night everlasting.

The shadows move and speak and breathe. They come out of the autumn sunshine and pound through pitch-black halls to work. They trail by Frank like a parade of ghosts before dawn, lacking form, without substance, black against the graying night.

That girl over there is one of them. There's laughter in her eyes. Sunshine lingers in her hair. Her mouth is full and red, half smiling. You start at her beauty and color. And then you remember.

Frank Hodges is not blind. Neither does he see. He only feels—varying intensities of light, form, size, texture.

All day he stands just inside the door of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration Building on New York avenue beside a line of sandwiches, fruit, cigars, cigarettes, and candy, which he sells. He's been standing there since February, when an inherent eye weakness dimmed his sight, when sunlight became gray and dawn night.

At first he sold only papers and magazines until he could no longer bear bringing home so little money to a wife and five children who live with him and his mother, Addie L. Hodges, at 313 K street northeast.

Wants Home of His Own.

So he stocked up on things to eat and smoke as well as things to read. And now the pennies have become dollars—a few of them—and Frank looks to the day when:

"I can get a place I can call my own again. Oh, they do everything they can to make me comfortable. They've been fine. But a fellow does like to feel his home is his own."

For 13 years Frank did own a home in Norfolk. He was a baker, a pastry cook, a very exacting trade, he'll tell you, where a gram of any ingredient too much or too little marked the difference between success and failure, where a fleck of eggshell made you a bum.

Then 14 months ago the light grew dim. Frank tried to read and the type blurred into thin lines. He tried taking the family for drives in the country and the roads grew narrow and were covered with mist.

He kept at his trade—bending low over mixing bowls, peering close at scales—until he feared his eyes would betray his art.

"I had a reputation to maintain, so I quit while I still had it," he said.

Slowly a curtain rolled between Frank and the world in ever thickening folds. Late afternoon changed to dusk, the days shortened until, nothing was left but shadows.

"I felt I was smothering, as though some one was pulling a blanket tightly about my face. Things seemed to be falling on me. I was frightened."

Now Laughs and Chirps.

But all that has passed. Frank almost chirps when he talks. He laughs. He jokes.

Shadows that are his customers run in and out of the vestibule buying candy, cigarettes and sandwiches. Frank hands them what they want, or they take it when he is busy.

From a multi-pocketed apron he makes changes—"almost as fast as a cash register"—distinguishing dimes, nickles and quarters by the way they feel.

His wares are arranged in rows on a shelf. He knows each brand of candy or cigarette by its position there. Sometimes one of his brothers comes down and sees "that I haven't got the magazines and papers upside down or something like that."

Frank thinks highly of humanity's integrity. He has no way of determining the denomination of paper money. Yet when his day's receipts are counted out at home each night, everything balances.

Some of his shadows he knows by the sound of their voices. Gradually he is replacing them with mental pictures of people. One day, perhaps, Frank will know what manner of man you are by the intonations of your voice, the things you talk about and how. But:

"It's been such a short while, you know, that I really haven't had time to get lined up on that."

Florence Haupt Becomes Bride

Marries William Glenn Keilholtz; Ceremony in Middletown.

Middletown, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—A wedding of much local interest was solemnized at the parsonage of Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church here tonight, when Miss Florence Virginia Haupt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Columbus W. Haupt, of Myersville, became the bride of William Glenn Kielholtz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin J. Kielholtz, of near Middletown.

The ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. Ralph Tabor, in the presence of members of the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom. Miss Madeline Toms, of Myersville, was maid of honor, and Max Dagenhart, of Rohrersville, was best man. Betty Lorraine Kielholtz, of Lime Kiln, niece of the groom, acted as flower girl.

Shugart—O'Rourke.

Westernport, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Miss Frances Ann Shugart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Shugart, and Hugh Martin O'Rourke, son of Mrs. Margaret O'Rourke, were married Monday at St. Peter's Catholic Church, the Rev. William J. McVeigh, of Oakland, Md., uncle of the bridegroom, officiating.

Roy Flannagan, Washington, D. C., and Miss Mary Welsh were the attendants. The bride is a graduate of St. Peter's High School and the Frostburg State Normal School.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Campbell, of Lynchburg, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Evelyn Campbell, to Marlin T. Stewart, which was solemnized August 12 at Hagerstown, Md., by the Rev. Paul Warthington, of the Baptist Church.

For some time the bride had been a member of the nursing staff of the Alexandria Hospital.

'Million-Dollar' Miami Pier Sold

D. C. Man Member of Syndicate Gets Property.

Miami's famed "million dollar" recreation pier passed yesterday into the hands of a Washington syndicate, of which Jules James, manager of the Lucky Strike Dress Shops, of this city, is a member. The consideration was undisclosed.

Mr. Jame's office reported he had gone to Miami for the negotiations, and probably would return Monday.

Although local sources disclaimed knowledge of the syndicate's intentions, the Associated Press reported from Miami that James H. Lathero, attorney for the syndicate, said extensive alterations and improvements were proposed for the pier. It said the purchase was made from the estate of the late William R. Hodges, of Miami Beach and Bethesda, and named Charles L. Apfel, New York attorney, as another member of the syndicate.

Roosevelt, Press Swap Compliments Upon Endurance

President Roosevelt keeps such accurate check of his press conferences that yesterday he was able to remind a roomful of newspapermen that it was his 150th meeting with the press since his inauguration.

Smilingly, he said he believed he should congratulate the correspondents on their powers of endurance.

"The same to you, sir!" came a response that provoked laughter.

Berlin to Pay U. S. Investors Interest Oct. 15

75 Per Cent of $2,100,000 Due Will Be Given Bondholders.

(Associated Press.)

The German Embassy reported last night that the Hitler government will pay approximately 75 per cent of the $2,100,000 in interest due American holders of $60,000,000 in Dawes loan bonds, due October 15.

Dr. Hans Luther, the German Ambassador, will call at the State Department this morning to notify Secretary Hull of his government's decision.

The payments will be made by transfers to be disbursed through J. P. Morgan & Co., American agents for the payments.

At the embassy it was explained that every possible effort had been made to find a solution to the financial problems arising from nonpayment of Dawes bond interests. Previously it had been said the interest would not be paid and official protests had ensued.

U. S. Rejected Compromise.

The October 15 payments will be made, it was said, despite the fact that Germany's foreign currency has been greatly depleted and that the German government has been unable to enter into any arrangement with the United States similar to agreements made with Great Britain, France and other nations for full payment.

Germany's moratorium on transfer of interest payments outside Germany has "frozen" the interest fund since July 1 and resulted in several sharp diplomatic exchanges.

The United States has dispatched two strongly worded notes to Berlin protesting payment in full of interest to Dutch, Swiss and other bondholders while American payments were held up. In addition President Roosevelt broke diplomatic precedent by inviting the German ambassador to the White House, where he protested in person against Germany's discriminatory action.

Half Already Deposited.

The embassy announced last night that on last July 1 its government deposited 50 per cent of the amount due on October 15 with the Dawes loan trustees at Basil, Switzerland. The deposit is in cash and is available to all creditors, including American bondholders.

The American share, in dollars, is estimated at approximately $1,000,000.

Sufficient foreign exchange is not available to make full payments to all bondholders and so, according to the embasy announcement, American bondholders and others not covered by special agreements will be paid partly in reichsmarks.

The reichsmarks may be left in Germany or sold at a discount in Germany. The discount on marks has ranged between 30 and 40 per cent and the embassy estimates that American bondholders will therefore receive approximately 75 per cent of the total due.

Germany's answer to Secretary Hull's charges of discrimination is that under this arrangement all foreign bondholders will receive equal treatment since they will receive 50 per cent in foreign exchange and 50 per cent in marks.

Abingdon May Get Bristol ABC Shop

Bristol, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Reports were current here today that Bristol's liquor dispensary, the abolition of which was voted Wednesday at a special referendum, will be moved to Abingdon, Washington County seat, 12 miles from this city. The reports, however, remain unconfirmed by officials of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Prohibitionists rolled up better than a 2-to-1 vote against legalized liquor sales in Wednesday's referendum, outvoting those favoring the continuance of sales by 707 to 352. The 1,060 ballots cast represented 69 per cent of the city's 1,545 qualified voters.

The result means the Bristol ABC store must be moved from the city within 60 days. It does not prohibit Virginia Bristolians from purchasing liquor by mail or express from any other ABC store, nor does it affect the State laws which will permit them to transport or store liquors purchased from ABC stores.

West Virginia Kidnap Suspects Are Seized

Martinsville, Va., Oct. 12 (AP).—Two men giving the names of Connolly Smith Jones, 30, of Birmingham, Ala., and R. C. Scurlock, 22, of Oak Hill, W. Va., are held in jail here charged with being the taxi bandits who kidnaped and robbed several persons in southern West Virginia last week.

State officers and special policemen at Stanleytown arrested the pair last night in a bullet-riddled sedan, identified as the taxi stolen near Bluefield and used in subsequent robberies in which the victims were left tied to trees on the tops of mountains.

Spanish Army Closing on Last Rebel Outpost

Bombed Arms Plants Used as Fort; Capture of Trubia Near.

Madrid, Oct. 12 (AP).—Gen. Eduardo Lopez Ochoa, at the head of the regulars and Foreign Legionnairies, pressed hard against the last rebel outpost in the Oviedo region, the government announced today.

Aviation units bombed an arms manufacturing plant at Trubia, used as a fort by the rebels, and a surrounding army was expected to take the town shortly. The Oviedo Cathedral, tomb of the former Kings of Asturias and Leon, was damaged in a bombardment.

Premier Alejandro Lerroux, whose rise to power started the rebellion, expressed the optimism of his government.

"The rebellion as a whole has been completely crushed," he said.

The air squadrons also bombarded Las Veredas and Los Caminos, where rebels reorganized after fleeing from Oviedo.

At San Sebastian police searched the office of La Prensa and confiscated arms and arrested the editor.

A council of court-martial proceeded at Barcelona against 17 Catalonians, with five death penalties requested. The remainder of the region was reported quiet.

Several judges were appointed to assist eight magistrates trying cases of those involved in the violence.

Madrid, Zaragoza, and Alusia, Bilbao and Barcelona were reported tranquil. At Bilbao factory workers returned to the shops. One company of soldiers sent to the manufacturing section returned with a hundred prisoners and a truckload of arms.

Asturias continued to be isolated, with communication possible only by means of the military telegraph.

Gen. Lopez's regulars in the last rebellious areas were gradually working toward an attack on Olloniego, the gateway to the mining district. It was considered possible troop reinforcements would be needed because of geographical difficulties.

Democrats Will End Deficit, Says Gerard

After a short conference with President Roosevelt, James W. Gerard, chairman of the Democratic National finance committee, yesterday declared that the party's deficit of $463,000 "will be cleaned up."

The current indebtedness compares with $570,000 owed by the party when Mr. Gerard took over the chairmanship of the committee last spring, he said. He added he is not worried about funds for the remainder of the Congressional campaigns.

Baltimore Liberal Is Appointed To Guide U. S. on Book Bans

Cairns Named Counsel to Collector of Customs to Rule on 'Morals.'

Appointment of Huntington Cairns, Baltimore liberal and lawyer, to advise collectors of customs whether books coming into this country from abroad should fall under the ban of "immoral articles" section of the 1930 tariff act, came to light yesterday.

Mr. Cairns was named weeks ago as a special customs counsel on a part-time basis to supervise customs officials when they attempt to act as literary censors. The appointment was made by Eli Frank, jr., chief counsel to the Customs Bureau, also a Baltimorean. Mr. Frank's idea was to end the hit-or-miss system of passing on books imported into the country, which for years has been a source of controversy.

The appointment came to light when the collector of customs in New York held up a copy of "The Rythm," an American-published book expounding a theory of birth control.

Fire in Apartment Fatal to Woman

Neighbor Carried Victim From Blazing Flat.

Mrs. Clara Allen, 55, of the 1200 block of Thirty-first street northwest, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital of injuries suffered Thursday when fire swept her apartment.

Physicians said Mrs. Allen, who was rescued from the burning flat by two neighbors, succumbed to the effects of smoke in the lungs, shock and to burns.

Charles Prime, 35, and Irving Bache, 36, who live at the same address, took Mrs. Allen from the rooms after the flames had reached her bed. The Fire Rescue Squad removed her to Emergency Hospital.

Court Holds Up Contempt Case

Palumbo to Be Tried Next Wednesday in Juror Bribe Attempt.

At the request of Denny Hughes, attorney, Justice James M. Proctor, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday postponed until Wednesday the trial of Louis Palumbo on a charge of criminal contempt of court.

The attorney told Justice Proctor he had not had sufficient time to look up the facts in the case.

Palumbo, according to a petition presented to Justice Proctor, was declared guilty of criminal contempt of court because he allegedly approached Charles William Powers, a juror in a gambling case, and told him it would be "well worth his while" if he returned a not guilty verdict in the case.

Powers had been sworn in as a juror before he informed Prosecutor Roger Robb of the conversation. He was discharged from the jury and was taken to the office of Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, where he made a sworn statement.

The District grand jury has completed its investigation of the occurrence. Palumbo is at liberty on a $1,000 bond following his arraignment before United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage on a charge of bribery.

Federation Renames Cumberland Officer

Mrs. Henry Oppenheimer, Baltimore, was elected president. Other officers are Mrs. Myer Sterngerger, Greensboro, N. C., first vice president; Mrs. Harry Lewis, Washington, second vice president; Mrs. D. B. Sonneborn, Baltimore, corresponding secretary; Mrs. David Goldberger, Wilmington, Del., recording secretary.

Labor Truce Threat Is Seen In Houde Case

Unionists Seeking to Force Showdown on Federal Prosecution.

By James D. Secrest.

A situation that might interfere with the industry-labor truce proposed by President Roosevelt was seen yesterday as the National Labor Relations Board moved to persuade the Department of Justice to reconsider its virtual dropping of the Houde Engineering Co. case.

While Lloyd K. Garrison, retiring chairman of the Labor Board, continued his stoical silence, it was known that he and the board's counsel conferred with attorneys at the Justice Department yesterday.

Meanwhile a move mas started in labor circles, with the encouragement of the board, to furnish the Justice Department with an overt act of defiance on the part of the Houde company, so that there could be no question of lack of evidence, as indicated by the Attorney General.

Duly elected representatives of the United Automobile Workers Federal Union in Buffalo will call on Houde officials formally and present demands that they be recognized for the purpose of collective bargaining for all employes of the plant.

The book in question was taken to London by Mrs. Hazel Moore, secretary of the National committee on legislation for birth control. When she attempted to bring the publication back into this country it was seized. Morris Ernst, who won admittance into this country for Joyce's "Ulysses," came here to urge admittance of "The Rythm" after the New York Customs Collector asked Washington for a decision.

Mr. Ernst was informed the matter had been laid before Mr. Cairns for an advisory opinion. The Baltimore lawyer is reported well-qualified for his task, having a literary background and frequently writing book reviews for The Baltimore Evening Sun, which long has assailed efforts at literary censorship.

Mr. Cairns is said to have made a special study of erotic literature. He probably has already read most of the books which will be referred to him by collectors of customs. It is expected that as time goes along, Mr. Cairns through his decisions will establish for the customs service an "index" of banned books and those which may be brought into the country.

Princess Marthe Bibesco

THE KING IS DEAD!

The king is dead! Brutally slain by an assassin's hand, Alexander of Yugoslavia died heroically in a foreign land. His death numbed the entire civilized world . . and added one more name to the shocking list of martyred kings.

Princess Marthe Bibesco was a personal friend of King Alexander. In tomorrow's Sunday Post she presents an exclusive story of the king as she knew him . . an inside view of the personality, character and truly lovable individuality of Alexander and his family. His sparkling intelligence . . his charm and simplicity . . his gifts of statesmanship . . his wisdom and unshakable will . . all portrayed as only a friend of long standing could describe them.

Intimate of royal families . . author . . authority on architecture . . fashion expert and world traveler . . Princess Bibesco is among the outstanding contemporary personalities of Europe. A list of her close friends would include George Bernard Shaw and Noel Coward, former King Alfonso and Charlie Chaplin.

Her story of King Alexander as she knew him is fascinating reading . . for it is the story of a martyr who, like many of his kind, was doomed to die for his beliefs.

Vertical Unionism.

Over stiff opposition from old-guard leadership the American Federation of Labor has at last consented to turn its policy toward industrial as opposed to craft unionism.

The change of emphasis is to be initiated cautiously, with full protection for the rights of those unions now organized along craft lines. And the extent to which organization by industry will be pressed is in large measure left to the discretion of the executive council, heretofore strongly conservative in composition. None the less this decision of the San Francisco convention is momentous.

It is momentous because it points to new accretions of power, and probably to a more cooperative attitude, on the part of the A. F. of L. The company union has flourished in this country not merely because of employer support, but also because the plant rather than the craft is the natural unit of organization. This fact is now given due recognition by labor leadership.

Similarly, employer hostility to trade unionism has to a large extent concentrated on the outside "interference" inevitable in horizontal craft unionism. Other substantial criticisms of the A. F. of L., such as the waste and annoyance of its frequent jurisdictional disputes, are directly traceable to the craft form of organization.

Close students of the labor movement have been in full agreement that the aspirations of labor under Section 7(a) of the Recovery Act could not in practice be achieved so long as methods of organization were confined to archaic lines, surviving from a more primitive period of industrial history.

The move toward organization by industry rather than by craft is far from being a solution of the labor problem. But it is a step which greatly helps to make constructive solution of that problem possible.

Federal Salaries.

Restoration of the salaries of Government employes to the predepression level is indicated by the Administration's price-raising program. The cost of living, especially in Washington, has increased very substantially since Congress imposed a temporary 15 per cent pay cut upon Federal workers. President Roosevelt anticipates further price advances, and he believes that wages should keep an even pace with this upward price movement. That statement suggests he will be favorable to wiping out completely the Federal salary cut.

Congress passed the economy act in the spring of 1933, when commodity prices were extremely low. Since that time the wholesale commodity price level has advanced nearly 30 per cent, although the cost of living has not yet risen proportionately. Congress recognized, last winter, the desirability of modifying the temporary salary scale. If prices continue to rise, elimination of the entire cut will be more than justified.

Substantial wage increases in private industry during the last year and a half are recorded by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Under present arrangements railway wages will be restored to their basic rate next April. Only a far more rigid economy campaign than is apparent in other branches of Federal expenditure could justify continuation of the salary cut for Government employes, even in its present modified form.

Sensible Censorship.

The history of censorship by the customs division of the Treasury Department is long and it has often been ludicrous. It contains, among others, the strange episode of a customs clerk in Boston who created a cause celebre by banning Voltaire's "Candide." It was another customs clerk who helped spread the fame of James Joyce's "Ulysses" by seeking to keep it out of the United States.

The appointment of Huntington Cairns, of Baltimore, to the legal staff of the Bureau of Customs, where he will act as a sort of literary adviser, is to be viewed in the light of this background. Hitherto there has been no one in the bureau to act in a discriminatory capacity, and a hit or miss method was employed. Fiascos resulted.

Theoretically, the Secretary of the Treasury is the arbiter in dubious cases. But naturally his power of censorship is delegated to others. Under the new set-up, any book, magazine or photograph which may arouse the suspicions of a customs clerk as violating the customs act of 1930, will come to Mr. Cairns. His word may not be final, but it is likely that his judgment will be respected by the chief counsel of the Bureau of Customs or the general counsel of the Treasury Department, through whose hands important cases will continue to pass.

Mr. Cairns is an ideal man for his task. A Baltimore lawyer of standing, a cultured gentleman of liberal taste, he has long been known for his restrained exposures of the more absurd cases of customs censorship. He may be expected to take his task seriously and to look upon such material as may come before him with all the tolerance of a Judge Woolsey.

The Treasury Department is to be congratulated for establishing the new post, and for its wisdom in selecting as its literary expert a man who recognizes a certain difference between Voltaire and La Vie Parisienne.

Devaluation Delusions.

President Roosevelt's intimation that prices should go higher has given rise to rumors that a further devaluation of the dollar is in prospect. Before these could be denied an erratic upward spurt of stock and commodity prices took place, accompanied by a fall of dollar exchange. It is apparent from these developments that a certain section of the public is still obsessed with the possibility of raising prices by resort to devaluation, in spite of the overwhelming evidence to show the ineffectual character of this sort of manipulation.

During the summer of 1933, after the enforced depreciation of the dollar, a rapid rise in stock and commodity quotations occurred. This was primarily due to speculative buying in anticipation of inflation ahead. There was what may best be described as a kind of "psychological inflation," which obviously afforded no firm foundation for a stable price structure. The inevitable reaction revealed the speciousness of the claim that previous price advances were directly connected with dollar depreciation.

Undoubtedly, the prices of certain commodities whose values are determined in world markets have responded in varying degrees to changes in the external value of the dollar. But the facts emphatically refute the contention that there is a close and measurable connection between changes in the gold value of the dollar and domestic prices. Every intelligent student of the problem knows that the so-called Warren theory will not stand up under examination.

Although wholesale prices are almost 30 per cent higher now than at the low point of March, 1933, the price of gold in terms of the dollar has been raised 69 per cent as a result of devaluation. If the prices of separate commodity groups are examined, the lack of correspondence between changes in the price of gold and of goods is even more striking. Farm products, for instance, are over 70 per cent above the level of March, 1933, while metals and metal products are but 11 per cent higher, and chemicals and drugs show an 8 per cent increase.

The experience of other countries confirms the evidence that there is no necessary connection between changes in domestic price levels and fluctuations in the exchange (gold) value of currencies. The British pound is almost as heavily depreciated in terms of gold as the dollar. Yet wholesale prices in Great Britain are less than 10 per cent above the level of September, 1931, when that country left the gold standard. Japan provides an even more striking refutation of the theories that have been responsible for our experiment in devaluation. With the yen quoted at about one-third of its gold parity, prices have advanced less than 20 per cent since Japan cut loose from gold.

The pronounced rise in prices that has occurred during the past year in this country can not be attributed solely, or even to any great extent, to dollar devaluation. It must be sought partly in normal business recovery; partly in NRA policies that have increased industrial production costs; partly in AAA crop-control measures, which, together with drought, have created a scarcity of certain agricultural commodities. If devaluation were accepted as an adequate explanation of the price rise of recent months, obviously all these other price-raising activities of the Administration would have to be rated as absolutely ineffectual.

There is always a possibility that devaluation, if it is progressive, may bring about a rise of prices that would more than satisfy the advocates of controlled inflation. Perpetual tampering with the currency might destroy public confidence and induce a panic flight from the dollar. In that case, prices might rise so fast and so far that even the most rabid inflationist would be glad to call a halt. By that time, however, it would be too late.

In A Spider's Web.

"As glorious a thing as mortal ever did."

So the Washington Monument is described by Charles Harris Whitaker in his fascinating book, "Rameses to Rockefeller." Whitaker loves it because it is "a soaring majesty of craftsman simplicity, rising from the earth, like a noble bole of genius." Robert Mills built it before he fell victim to the belief that Greek ruins were the perfection of all art. And so it stands over the Potomac today, a gracefully alive obelisk startling in a simplicity that no extraneous scroll work or useless pillars have defiled.

But the Washington Monument that you may see this evening as dusk falls, or later, when the thin paring of a moon casts feeble rays in its direction, calls for a Pennell's pencil for description. Against the flecked sky the steel framework loses all of its harsh angularity. It encases the dark form of stone that stands silent sentinel above the river. It blends, near the base, with dark, unmoving trees. It is something that can not be recaptured in words. The red glow at the top lends an anticlimactic touch of humor, like a workman's lantern left there by mistake.

When the staging finally is taken away, and the Monument stands clean and fine again in the sunlight, it will once more blend into the consciousness of thousands of Washingtonians who daily pass it without a glance. There will be some, however, who will long remember the spider web as it looks now at the darkening of the day, like fine pencil lines scratched there by an irresponsible child. There are some who will say that never has the Monument looked better than under its knitted coat of steel. Like all beautiful things, it means whatever you want it to mean. But who can now look at it and see nothing but steel piping for workmen to move on, something usable only?

Some will say, perhaps with truth, that through the meticulous design of the engineer the steel frame itself has become a "soaring majesty of craftsman simplicity," and that is why it is so lovely to look upon. Whatever the reason, the fact remains that the slim shaft now caught so firmly in a net of mesh is something not to be missed; not by those who have the capacity for finding beauty wherever man or nature may have left it.

The Naval Discussions.

The problem of the limitation of naval armaments is concentrating at London. Delegates of the United States and Japan are en route to the British Capital to engage in preliminary discussions. In a large measure the naval conference to be held next year will be influenced by this exploratory work. For still more important reasons, however, the spotlight of interest is turned on Downing street.

Until recently, attention was focused upon Japan's new naval policy. Now that country has adopted a definite program for presentation at London. While known to be based upon a demand for equality, details of the Japanese proposal have not been made public. But it is unlikely to be of a character which will flatly close the door to further negotiations. Admiral Yamamoto, head of the Tokyo delegation to the preliminary conferences, says that the Japanese would like to see all navies reduced, with the strongest powers making the greatest sacrifices. "All nations," he says, "are entitled equally to enjoy a sense of national security."

Likewise, the American position is fairly well defined. Officials here have said little about the policy they will follow at London, but opposition to any Japanese demand for virtual parity may be taken for granted. Appointment of Admiral Standley, Chief of Naval Operations, to serve with Norman H. Davis as this country's delegation at the preliminary conferences tends to confirm this assumption.

The policy which Great Britain will follow is at the moment less predictable than in the case of either Japan or the United States. Obviously the British are playing a waiting game. No doubt many international issues besides naval strength will enter into the London conversations. Since the conversations in London are to be bilateral, as well as preliminary, in character, political and economic issues are likely to be carefully explored. Apparently, definition of British policy will wait upon these discussions. And it may well be influenced by sequels to the tragedy at Marseille.

Naval disarmament is one of the world's most serious problems. Far-reaching consideration and cooperative effort by all of the great naval powers will be necessary to make any headway toward its solution. But sincere advocates of disarmament will deprecate any move which tends to subordinate the central issue to any form of bargaining between the parties.

Small-Loan Racket.

Quite a number of legitimate small-loan agencies are cooperating with Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman in drafting regulations to govern their business. That fact is a guide to the intentions of District officials in trying to revive the small-loans statute, which has long been considered a dead letter.

Apparently there will be no attempt to put out of business legitimate agencies operating on a reasonable basis. Mr. Prettyman is merely trying to eliminate the loan sharks, and to bring all small lending agencies under a supervision which will be resented only by the unscrupulous.

Extensive abuses were revealed at hearings before the Senate District Committee during the last session of Congress. In some instances borrowers have paid more than the original amount of their loan without reducing their obligation. By law the interest rate can not exceed 1 per cent per month, but to this rate exorbitant service charges are frequently added. Procurers who assume the position of agent for the borrower, but who are actually employes of the lending agency, exact large fees for negotiating loans. Individuals whose financial needs are acute often become easy victims to this racket without understanding the obligations they are assuming.

New legislation may be necessary to protect small borrowers from such piracy. But it is no simple matter to draft a law that would eliminate the swindlers without severely handicapping legitimate lending organizations. In view of this fact, Mr. Prettyman's attempt to protect the public through flexible regulations is an intelligent approach to a difficult problem. Certainly the experience thus gained will guide local authorities in drafting a permanent law, if this unsavory racket can not be cleared up without waiting for Congress to act.

When it comes to ending poverty in California, it might be well for Upton Sinclair to recall that this was done in Florida some years ago.

Evolution finally came to the aid of mountain climbers. Recently in Kentucky a child was born with 12 toes.

Mile Posts

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE ALLIES LOST GHENT; foes pressed nearer to Ostend; Germans struck Russia on sea, sinking a cruiser.

FOUR "TWILIGHT SLEEP" babies were born at the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital in Boston, and, in spite of the fact that the method was in every case a complete success, a flood of protests were sent in condemning the practice as unmoral, irreligious and unbiblical. It was stated by the superintendent of the hospital that all of the letters were from men.

Reds and Reds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to protest against the eye-paining regularity of the press denouncing hot-headed American citizens "as Reds" every time they call a strike or stage a walk-out in protest against the unfair advantages organized money takes at times.

Those who use the term "Red" are decidedly ungrateful to the memory and efforts of our Revolutionary fathers, who rebelled against the British crown, won the Continental War and assisted Gen. George Washington to the Presidency of a wilderness community that is now "God's greatest empire of freemen!"

Look back, all of you who would cry "Red" against the free acts of your fellow countrymen—take a look at recorded historical facts of the War of 1776. See for yourselves the barefooted, hungry, ragged and cold patriots in camp at Valley Forge and you will see who were real Reds. Then kiss the book that holds their sacred names, begging: "God have mercy on me, a fool."

Impressionistic "Lifts."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it because memories recall experiences which might make others jealous that The Post-Impressionist fails to mention the principal advantage derived from a slow elevator in a newspaper establishment? Ask him to dwell upon the past. How many times has an irate reader boarded a "lift," vowing vengeance, to finally arrive at his editorial den and present him with a full-grown rose which was only a bud when he commenced the ascent?

As for new elevators in the Washington Monument, it always has seemed to me a desecration to make provision for joy rides in the noble shaft erected in commemoration of the man who was, is, and always will be, "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen." While reconstruction is in progress, why not do away with elevators, steps—everything which detracts—seal the doors and rededicate the structure as a monument, which thought was in the minds of those who planned its erection?

A carrousel in Lincoln Memorial would be as appropriate as the vehicles which convey gum chewing, peanut and candy eating tourists, who giggle, laugh and shout, having no thought of the dark days which were made light by George Washington. THE OLD TIMER.

An Autumn Fisherman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Mr. R. F. Green in The Post of October 6 gets a hearty second from me. I have always read with much interest the column entitled "Hook, Line and Sinker" and would like to see it continued. The fishing season is still with us and large catches are being made. So let us have some more of the fishing news.

The tide tables were of much help. I would suggest that you publish this feature every Friday for the following weeks, even if you do not revive the "Hook, Line and Sinker" column.

Spencer and Mill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Among the recent letters in The Post was one signed S. J. Hamilton, who gives us a few high lights upon the lives of Henry George, Herbert Spencer and "John S. Mills."

Will Mr. Hamilton tell us at which period in his long and distinguished life Herbert Spencer repudiated any of his writings—and when he was "knighted" and where? Is the "John S. Mills," referred to in his letter, John Stuart Mill, author of "Political Economy," who, Mr. Hamilton states, furnished Herbert Spencer his "ideas?"

One might with equal candor say that Gladstone appropriated the "ideas" of Disraeli, or that Shakespeare took his cue from Ben Jonson. Give us more light on the source of your information, Mr. Hamilton. H. MORRISON, JR.

3,840 Awful Shouts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can fully sympathize with Miss Durham in her article entitled "Washington Noises," appearing in your paper of October 5. Our newspaper boy isn't right under our window, but he isn't far away—on the corner of Fourteenth and Irving streets northwest—and he surely does his bit toward shattering some of the nerves in that neighborhood.

One Saturday afternoon, when the noise was particularly awful, I estimated the number of times this boy cried out his wares. From 2 p. m. until about 10 p. m., 8 hours, 8 yells a minute—480 in one hour—3,840 times we heard that awful shout. Hard on the boy, I should say, and terrible on the nerves of those who have to hear it. Do the boys sell more papers by making so much noise? I don't believe they do.

Something should be done about these noisy newsboys on many corners in the city, trying to "outloud" all of the other noises. We also have an outdoor radio on another corner, and that should come under the ban as an unnecessary nuisance. Let's hear from others who would like to have unnecessary noises eliminated or toned down.

Southern Heroism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the newspapers recently, I have noticed that the South has been constantly abused through editorials written by people north of the Mason-Dixon line.

It is evident that these "Yankees" have forgotten that the South has been the birthplace of countless men who through their efforts and sacrifices virtually founded and explored this great country. Following are a few examples of Southern courage and determination:

The march on Fort Vincennes by that ragged, half-starved band of Virginia and Kentucky riflemen, through floods and bitter cold, which resulted in its capture, thereby adding the Northwest territory to our Nation.

California and the great Southwest were added to our domain through war with Mexico, under the brilliant leadership of such men as Polk, Scott and Zachary Taylor, all Southerners.

Texas entered the Union through the efforts of Stephen Austin and Sam Houston.

The exploration of the vast unknown stretches of the Pacific Northwest by Merriweather Lewis and William Clark, which thereby established the claim of the United States to this territory.

Jefferson's purchase of Louisiana, and the Battle of New Orleans, when Jackson's soldiers upheld that claim.

Even some of the North's great fighting men of the Civil War period were Southerners—for instance, Gen. George H. Thomas, a Virginian, and Admiral David Farragut, a Tennesseean.

Gen. Stonewall Jackson was the greatest military genius this country ever had. If not, why do the leading powers of Europe make comprehensive studies of Jackson's valley campaigns?

ANDREW E. MOSBY.

On the Air.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of October 8 entitled "Tuning In," you suggest that the public should "storm the commission to tell what they want and what they don't want."

If the Radio Commission really wants to know what the public wants, there is no better guide to the cultural I. Q. of the public than some of our great National daily newspapers, such the Kansas City Star, the Boston Transcript, the Baltimore Sun, the Washington Post and the Christian Science Monitor. If the Radio Commission would measure the agate lines of news matter, editorials, special articles, social, educational and household departments, giving full credit to the quality of the writing and the manner in which these are handled by the writers, and then compare the whole to the average program of the best radio outlet, the daily paper would take all the honors for quality and quantity of material used.

Our National weeklies and monthlies, article for article, compared with the radio programs, also would win. The best newspapers and the best magazines build up to the best in us, instead of catering to the worst in us. The radio programmakers are improving gradually; but they lag far behind—they should be leaders, since they are giving and not selling to the public. But they also monopolize the air without cost, and thus owe a special obligation to present only the best. Much of their stuff is, nevertheless, in quality, not unlike the "penny dreadfuls."

"Travellers' Rest."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your article in The Post of October 9 interested me greatly. I wish you would convey to Mr. Raymond Jeffords, of the 600 block of E street northwest, the following bit of information that may interest him.

"Traveller's Rest" was the home of Gen. Horatio Gates. It has for many years belonged to relatives of mine—and is a most interesting old homestead. It is situated near the road that goes from Kearneysville, W. Va., to Charles Town, W. Va.

As a girl, I visited "Traveller's Rest" frequently and was greatly thrilled by the secret passages, batten shutters with the loopholes, etc.

Concerning Letters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I must tell you how much I enjoy reading The Post—especially the editorials and "Letters to the Editor."

Many would be afraid to publish the truth as you publish it. But this attitude will strengthen your paper even more, as people want to see things as they really are.

I was particularly impressed recently with two letters, one by Ned, "Within and Without," September 24 issue, and the other, "Tammany Technique," a few days later, by Charles Hooper. Both bring out the fact that there are enemies at work in our beloved land, and if allowed to continue they will eventually destroy the Government of the United States.

I thank these two men for the courage shown in voicing their convictions and the editor of The Post for publishing them. Few editors have the courage to print such truths. I can readily see why The Post is so highly commended by so many of its readers.

It is most unfortunate that the Administration should listen to the admonition of a Representative from Tammany Hall. It would be infinitely better off today had the "Patronage Dispenser" remained at his former job, for which he was probably more equipped than he is for the Cabinet.

Gridiron Psychology

Postoffice, Saturday.

FROM diamond to gridiron: the sports writers have put their baseball vocabularies into camphor bags and patched up those metaphors of theirs which liken football to war. They compare the line to the infantry, the backfield to the tanks—and the coaches to the general staff.

But it seems to us that they are omitting one apt comparison. They are not talking about the offensive and defensive propaganda of the once all-amateur game.

The commander of troops in the field realizes that the maintenance of their morale is among his important cares; the successful coach has learned a like lesson. Just as the military strategist provides an organization to lower the fighting spirit of his enemy, so do many football directors evolve plans for lowering the fighting spirit of their teams' opponents.

Indeed, the more delicate uses of "psychology" were known even in Percy Haughton's Harvard days. He was "the first to apply scientific tactics; his players' conferences resembled a conclave of efficiency experts." Yet, at a Yale contest, "he was not above a little Barnum-like showmanship."

John J. McCarthy has recalled the incident in the Red Book: "Haughton had three dozen footballs distributed widely over the gridiron shortly before game-time and then sent out his star drop-kicker, Brickley, to 'lift' those pigskins, placed at all angles, until the entire 36 had been disposed of in a spectacular fashion. Yale confidence began to slip. Lined up for the kick-off, Yale's was not the same jaunty eleven which had dashed out a few minutes before."

And Harvard won.

In one of West Virginia's games with Centre College, the coach of the latter produced a new fashion in football clothes for the undoing of the men from Morgantown. He warned the referee:

"We have a boy named Murphy. He is a ten-second man. I'm going to send him in as a sub. He will come on in a track-suit, wearing sprinter's shoes, but the soles will have regulation cleats, not spikes. There will be a couple of backward passes, then McMillen will shoot it 40 yards, and Murphy will be there to get it."

What happened, Mike Thompson, assisted by Wesley Stout, once narrated in the Saturday Evening Post: "Murphy trotted out in the flimsy track-suit as scheduled, and West Virginia didn't know whether to laugh or be worried. He took the pass just as predicted and made a touchdown. The suit may have shaved a fraction off his time, but it was mostly ballyhoo. "Centre won by 14-6."

A dozen or more of these classical instances of moral suasion have been assembled by some tireless writer in the Readers' Digest. There is that Georgia Tech captain who, when his opponents had forced the ball close to the Georgia goal-line, successfully interrupted their final consultation by entering their huddle with the disconcerting invitation to a dance scheduled for that evening: a maneuver doubtless known as "disrupting concentration." There are those Villanova players who would always help a fallen Bucknell man to his feet with the solicitious remark, "You don't look well: shall I call the doctor?" And there is the following story, first told by John Heisman in Liberty, about no less a personage than Red Grange:

"When preparing to go up against a one-man team, coaches teach their charges to concentrate on the rival star. Such a team and such a star were Red Grange and Illinois. Grange usually carried the ball three-fourths of the time, so the Gopher (Minnesota) coaches directed eight of their team to concentrate on him. For an entire week beforehand the coaches talked about Grange, his red hair, his summer ice work, anything to rivet the squad's thoughts on him. Over and over the coaches told them that this man, demigod though he was, could be stopped. The climax was reached on the morning of the game when the Minnesotans (the Gophers) awoke to find every post, fence, tree and barn placarded with three flaming words: 'He is here!' He? Who but Grange? To the Gophers those words yelled a challenge. . . . Grange was doomed."

No collection of football stories would, however, be complete without at least one concerning Knut Rockne, of Notre Dame. "One of his specialties was an overpowering display of strength, which licked the opposition mentally from the instant his team took the field. It was he who originated the stunt of having more than a hundred lads romp on to the field for the sole purpose of impressing the opposition with this reserve strength. Rival coaches began to instruct their proteges to keep their eyes on the ground until the first line-up!"

At such capable hands, yet by such empirical methods, was the great science of Football Psychology modeled. Now, as was inevitable, it is being taken up by the more learned. We are informed that in this season of 1934, at certain grave colleges, the dons of the Departments of Psychology are lending the coaches their academic aid.

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Ballyhoo, Unlimited.

IT has been quite a mystery to the boys around Washington who try to find things out just what justification there was for the enthusiasm of Mr. Francis J. Gorman who led the recent textile strike. His enthusiasm in the public prints was understandable, of course. Regardless of how he may have really felt, here was the place to grin all over himself.

BARGERON

But the truth is that he really felt enthusiastic, and still does, presumably. In view of the fact that the textile workers lost, it has been estimated, $20,000,000 in wages and then came right back to where they were at the outset, arbitration of their dispute, together with the fact that the shutdown fit right in with the employers' plans, generally speaking, it was impossible to tell on just what this real optimism of Mr. Gorman's was based.

It becomes quite apparent now. The gentleman, with the aid of a friendly press, got away with one of the biggest bluffs that has ever been staged in this country.

The membership of the textile union, on which its delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor at San Francisco are based, turns out to be at its highest mark just 55,000 out of between six and seven hundred thousand workers.

Observers at the time remarked about the unusual stage management of the great textile strike, a strike that was heralded on the front pages for days as a crucial moment in the Nation's recent history. As to just whether it constituted a crucial moment after all is something else, but it will go down as the greatest strike to take place in the newspapers for a long time.

Mr. Gorman had the services of the highly skilled propagandist, Mr. Chester Wright, who while formerly the propagandist for the federation, is now engaged in a propaganda business of his own. After this job his services should be in great demand.

One thing that struck me at that time—I was out of the country—was the pictures I saw in the papers of the strike leaders standing over a telegraph operator while he tapped the signal that started the strike. This was bunk, of course. Any messages Mr. Gorman sent out were sent out on machines from the telegraph offices. I understand there was some excellent dramatization of the strike on the radio, too, and also a lot of talk of mysterious plans numbered from 1 to 15, that with the wonderful campaign which had been worked out, all Mr. Gorman had to do was to flash the signal to his constituents, "Put into effect plan 12" or "Carry out No. 13," &c.

All in the world Mr. Gorman seems now to have had was just enough members to intimidate the other workers—that and the realization that he had everything to gain and nothing to lose.

* * * *

Before him, though, there was the great steel strike which did not materialize but which gave the country the jitters for several weeks. It develops that on August 31 the Amalgamated Steel Workers had a membership of some 5,500, an increase of but 900 over a year ago.

And before that we were told that a crisis threatened in the automobile industry. It occupied our headlines for quite a while. The five Federal unions in the automobile industry have a membership, according to their registration for the San Francisco convention, of less than 6,000.

The amazing thing is that the whole federation has a gain of but 330,000 over the past year, bringing its membership to 2,600,000. This is its paid up membership. It claims to have 5,000,000 members including those who can't pay their dues.

The main purpose in bringing this up is in connection with the statement of Mr. Elisha Hansen before the newspaper publishers the other day that there is a vast propaganda machine operating in Washington. It would seem that there is, indeed.

Hanson Charges New Deal Perils Press Freedom

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP).—Elisha Hanson, Washington attorney and counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, in an address here tonight said the freedom of the press was in peril.

"There is today," Mr. Hanson said, "great danger that unless publishers are alert and vigilant, your only news about Washington will be just news which the Administration wants you to have, supplied to you by official agencies charged with the responsibility of bottling up all sources and preventing the dissemination of any information other than that officially sponsored.

"Publishers are cognizant of the efforts to control our news by indirection, instead of by the direction of the censors, and if they meet their responsibilities the country will get, as in the past, news, and not propaganda.

"Wherever you find a despot or a dictator in power, there you will find a servile, suppliant and controlled press. There can not be a democracy without a free press, and there can not be human liberty where censorship and propaganda go hand in hand."

Crop Control Protests Flow in From South

Cotton Estimates by Percentage Method Hard on Farmers, Wire to Wallace Complains.

By Stanley F. Morse
(Special Correspondence of The Post).

Characteristic of these pleas for modification of the Bankhead act, so that farmers may sell the cotton produced in excess of their allotments without payment of the tax of $20 per bale, is the telegram sent to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace by the Sumter County (S. C.) Democratic executive committee. This points out that the percentage method of estimating permissible production of cotton is working a great hardship on many farmers, especially the small ones.

An example of what is causing this outcry has been observed by the writer as follows: A share-crop farmer permitted to grow 11 acres of cotton showed a five-year average production of 255 pounds lint cotton per acre, but the county committee whittled down his allotment to 180 pounds. With 1,980 pounds lint, or about 4 bales of cotton worth not over $65 per bale, his gross income will be $260, of which he already owes $60 advanced by his landlord, and must pay the customary rent of two-thirds of his crop (as the landlord furnishes everything except the labor), leaving him about $30 for his year's work. But he will probably produce around 825 pounds more cotton than his allotment, and if this could be sold without tax his additional share would be $35.

There are thousands of similar cases in the South. A mass meeting of 600 farmers from three counties held September 25 at Kingstree, S. C., passed resolutions asking for relief from "the enforcement of this unjust, disastrous and confiscatory law" and requests the Governor of South Carolina immediately to call a State-wide meeting of farmers to "take such steps as may be necessary."

HOWEVER, in reply to the Sumter County protest and previous to the Kingstree meeting, C. A. Cobb, chief of the cotton production section, Commodities Division, AAA, wrote a detailed letter to the Sumter committee. He states that "a few raps on the shins in applying the Bankhead act are not going to stop the cotton producers" from controlling production. And, in referring to the specific complaint of C. H. Noell, a Georgia farmer, Mr. Cobb attempts to show how cotton control benefits him.

The grower has averaged 14 bales of cotton worth in 1932 about $420. His allotted production this year is 8.3 bales which at 13 cents a pound should bring him $540. But Mr. Cobb does not figure that this year's dollar is worth 40 per cent less than last year's, so, to make a fair comparison, Mr. Noell's crop this year in terms of the 100-cent dollar has a value of only $320. Or to put it another way the increased cost of farm supplies, groceries, etc., will absorb the higher return from his cotton.

The most astonishing revelation is that only 40,000 questionnaires were sent to the entire cotton belt to find out the sentiment of hundreds of thousands of cotton farmers towards the proposed Bankhead cotton control act. Much publicity has been given the statement that "over 95 per cent of the farmers of the South" approved this law. It is doubted if our Government has ever before practiced deception in such a wholesale way.

With several hundred thousand cotton farmers in the South only 25,000 questionnaires were returned. And most of these came from persons who were almost sure to favor any legislation proposed by the Administration. According to Mr. Cobb's letter these 25,000 questionnaires were distributed "throughout the entire belt to crop reporters (farmers reporting to the United States Department of Agriculture), to county agents (who distributed them to handpicked farmers) and to some 9,000 local committeemen * * *" Thus, before these questionnaires were sent out, the A. A. A. regimenters in charge knew that most of the replies would be favorable.

THIS ballyhooing the subservient approval of a few hand-picked farmers as genuine expression of public opinion, seems to be typical of A A A methods. The same thing is being done in other parts of the country at meetings of farmers packed and dominated by county agents and extension workers. For instance, according to the Associated Press, a meeting of "about 300 corn-hog farmers, extension agents and county farm agents from Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas adopted a resolution at a region! meeting here yesterday calling on the Government to continue the program."

This meeting was held at Kansas City September 13 and 14 and clearly did not represent the opinion of the million or so farmers in that region. Indeed it is now a matter of common knowledge that Federal and State agricultural officials (including the staffs of State agricultural colleges and experiment stations) who receive part or all of their salaries from Federal funds do not dare oppose the AAA program for fear of losing their jobs. Here we have regimentation of those who should be protecting the farmers' interests and giving them disinterested advice besides the danger that the instruction of students in the State colleges may be (and probably is) controlled from Washington.

Why then should the AAA be publicizing the apparent indorsement by the farmers of its production control program? It must be remembered that at first production control was purely voluntary with bonus payments attached, the second phase is largely compulsory, still with benefit payments, but with penalties of fines and imprisonment added; the next phase perhaps will be entirely compulsory without any payments, but with plenty of penalties—the Russian collective system.

Farmers' organizations and leading farmers who realize the vast complexity of American agriculture understand the impossibility of human control of so huge and vital an industry. They know that there is no existing superman omniscient enough successfully to handle such a program. So when impractical men like Wallace and Tugwell, entirely lacking in large-scale executive experience, with a corps of theoretical technicians and clerks, attempt to readjust American agriculture, the outcome is bound to be anything but beneficial to our farmers.

As Quillen Looks at It

Letters of a Bald-Headed Dad to Daughter—"Life Is Tough."

By Robert Quillen.

My dear Louise:

Oh, my dear, I shudder to think what things the world will do to you unless you learn to doubt and question.

Last night you reported Bob's narrow escape as a proven fact, and thus made yourself responsible for the truth of it.

All the evidence you had to support an outlandish tale was Bob's word, and that was very, very little. Yet you accepted it without a grain of salt.

You must learn to disbelieve, my dear. If you don't, you will have no more chance than a rabbit in a den of foxes.

The world has little regard for truth. From the highest statesman to the lowest peddler, it warps the truth to fit its needs.

And those who believe untruth are preyed upon all their days. Since the beginning of time the gullible have carried the world on their backs. The easily fooled earn their bread in the sweat of their brows and deliver the greater part of it to those who are hard to fool.

You must learn to analyze and test all that you hear and read.

The world is flooded with partisan propaganda and very little of it tells the truth.

During the World War an English propagandist sent out a story, supported by photographs, asserting that the Germans were boiling their dead for the grease. Millions of the gullible believed it; and though the author confessed his deceit when the war was over, there are many who believe it still.

In a more recent controversy, important enough to attract universal attention, one of the leaders was quoted almost daily by the press. In this instance I happened to know the facts, and I saw none of his statements that was free of deliberate falsehood.

Isn't that evidence enough? If men in high places, trusted with power, use untruth as a tool to gain their ends, do you believe lesser men will hesitate to lie if lying promises a profit?

I don't want you to be suspicious. You can believe those you know and trust responsible business men who have a reputation to preserve. But you must make it a rule to believe no stranger, without proof, if your belief would benefit him at your expense. Life is tough for simpletons, and none but the hard to fool can escape paying tribute to the smart ones. Love. DAD.

H. I. Phillips' Once Over

French Win Catalonian Revolt as Cubs Take Series.

"Well, what do you think of the Catalonian revolt?"

"Oh, those Frenchmen are always starting something. I didn't read all the details. Who's the leader of it?"

"Prince Hohenlohe, I think the name is."

"Did you like the way the World Series came out?"

"It didn't make much difference to me. I thought Daffy Rowe pitched just as well as Schoolboy Dean, though."

"I thought Goose Martin played great ball, except for one bad day, and Pepper Goslin was certainly good."

"It was a close call for Dizzy Hallahan that time he was hit in the head by a pitched ball."

"Yeah. Well, the Cubs played smart baseball, and I'm glad they won the series."

"I see where Frankie Richberg, the Fordham Flash, has practically supplanted Gen. Johnson in the NRA."

"Yes, he and Robbie Perkins. It looks to me as if Roosevelt was going to drop all those codes and get back to two budgets in every home. Business is picking up. I read where a big department store man, Navin Field, said a new boom was just ahead of us."

"Pepper Babson says the worst is over, too."

* * * *

"What did you think of that murder trial down in Wilkes-Barre, Ohio?"

"I was sort of sorry to see those Dean boys convicted, but the way her mother testified against Gloria Morgan Whitney evidently swayed the jury."

"I see where the New York Republicans named Joe-Joe Moses for Governor."

"Well, he's a good man, but he can't beat Ducky-Wucky Lehman, if you ask me."

"Did you read where the Marchioness of Milford-Haven is coming over here to testify in the Insull trial?"

"She and Lady Furness. They're both going to deny they ever taught the Insull children to shake cocktails."

"Do you think they'll convict Insull?"

"No. I think his story that the girl fell in the boat and hit her head on the oarlocks is true."

"But what about the blackjack?"

"Those confessions he made in Greece don't mean anything."

"I see where California is pretty much worried that Wild Bill Sinclair will be elected governor."

The Man Without Nerves

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

"ONE has one's principles," Milhaven sighed. "Where did you put that antidote? Ah, I see it."

He was on the point of moving toward the bottle when suddenly there was a still, very quiet voice from the farther end of the room.

Milhaven turned around in cold answer. There was a little stab of flame, a sharp report. The bottle crashed into pieces and the liquid streamed down on the floor.

Huitt replaced the cartridge, but did not at once transfer the revolver to his pocket.

"If you can save the young man's life now for your golf, Milhaven," he sneered, "why do it. I am more interested in living myself. Without the antidote, he will be dead in 24 hours and safe.

Death Certain.

"I would rather we have to deal with his manuscript in the prosecuting counsel's hand than with him alive in the witness box!"

Christopher watched the stain upon the carpet with despairing eyes.

"It this true?" he faltered.

Neither of the other two answered him but their looks were sufficient.

"You have forgotten yourself, Huitt. It was my will that this young man should live."

"I may seem an egoist," Huitt replied, in his steely, mechanical tone, "but my own safety is more to me than the future of any sport."

"Nevertheless," Milhaven continued, "all the vital steps in the matters wherein we have been concerned have been decided by me. I do not suffer interference with my plans, as you will discover. That lad's father once treated me like a prince. I never forget."

Huitt pointed to the carpet.

"Is there anything you can do about it?" he asked coldly.

Milhaven seemed to have given himself up to a fit of meditation.

"Just at present, Huitt," he acknowledged, "I fear there is nothing."

Christopher Sandford's eyes half closed. His last conscious impression of the two men was that both were listening.

Christopher opened his eyes once more to the sense of a passing world. A pair of thin, strong fingers had parted his lips. The voice of Mme. de Sayal sounded in his ears.

"I hope you can understand what I am telling you," she said, "for it may mean life or death for you. I could not wake you before. Lord Milhaven has just given me the other half of the antidote. He never trusted Huitt, so he kept back half. You must not move your head, but you must be very careful to swallow. I shall pour it quietly."

A little stream of something fell on his tongue. He made an effort to swallow. His mouth was held open—he himself had not the power to open or close it.

"If that was not too late," she said, "you will find that you can begin to move your limbs very soon. After that you will be all right. I can not help you further for the present."

She left the room, and before she returned Christopher found his strength returning. He tried to rise from the couch as she entered.

"I must follow them," he said.

Huitt Alone Mentioned.

"Do not hurry," she begged. "You must not collapse here. Tell me—in these memoirs of your, is there anything very incriminating about me?"

"Neither about you nor Milhaven," he assured her. "I came to England to find Huitt. I could have gone to the police long ago, but I could see there was something going on here. I stayed and watched. I have run no risk, so far as Huitt was concerned. He will hang."

"If they catch him," she murmured.

"He must be caught," Tyssen answered. "They have only a few hours' start. How can they possibly get away?"

She smiled.

"So far as Milhaven is concerned, how could they possibly stop him?" she retorted. "In 40 hours he will land in Abyssinia. No one can follow him where he is going. No one else could get into that part of the country alive."

She pointed out of the window, down to the elaborate gates which led to the golf club.

"Milhaven naturally has a key to those gates," she confided. "The land belongs to him and the converted clubhouse is his property. The airplane sheds are his. Several of the members rent one. The largest he keeps for himself.

Escape Planned.

"He has the most perfect machine here that has yet been built," she continued. "It is a model which has never been shown. He preferred to keep it for himself because of what might happen. The machine has been ready to start night or day for 12 months. Not a soul except myself and Huitt and the pilots, who have worn a police uniform now and then, know what he has been keeping in that guarded shed."

"What made Milhaven take to this crooked business?" Christopher Sandford asked.

"For one thing, he loathes poverty," she answered, "and there was no money when he inherited. For another thing, he loves excitment. Huitt's skill, too, as a forger fascinated him. It was he who brought him to England and got him into the bank.

"Who knocked Anthony Sarson out that night?" Christopher asked.

"One of Milhaven's men," she answered. "Strangers weren't wanted so near the byways."

"One thing more," he begged. "Milhaven—and you?"

"Have you never had an idea?" she asked, with a strange little smile. "I was born in Florence and married to an Italian, but Milhaven is my brother.

"I came here hoping—but it was foolish of me! One might as well hope to change the stars as to influence him."

She suddenly held up a warning finger and stole away from him. Through the trees he saw her pass to where her easel was already arranged. He heard the chattering of a little group of caddies passing along the byway to the golf links.

Acclaimed by Police.

The dignitaries of Scotland Yard were inclined to make a fuss over Christopher Sandford when, this time in a properly authenticated police car, he drove up to London to visit them. The subcommissioner himself received him.

"Your indictment of this extraordinary fellow, Huitt," the official pronounced, after the customary greetings, "is quite a wonderful document, Mr. Sandford. You seem to have forgotten nothing. As for the concluding events in the amazing episode, we should have been rather in the dark but fortunately one of the mechanics at the golf club aerodrome has come across with the truth.

"It seems that Huitt and Milhaven arrived there about 4 o'clock in the morning. Milhaven ordered his special machine started at once, took his place at the control and called out to Huitt that he was just trying the engine for three minutes. Huitt remained with the others watching and, according to our man, Milhaven circled down once, then descended to within shouting distance.

"'Huitt,' he cried, 'no one has ever profited by disobeying me. I had been convinced before that it was you who were concerned in that shooting affair at Sydney, you would have been left long ago, where you are now—plante la!'

"The machine shot up. Huitt discharged two barrels of his revolver after it quite ineffectually. Then calmly, but with deadly precision, he blew out his own brains."

Milhaven Escaped.

"Any news of Milhaven?" Christopher asked with a slight shiver.

"He passed over Trieste at midday yesterday, heading southeastward. By the by, Mr. Sandford, what about Mme. de Sayal? She seems to have been mixed up in these affairs. I dare say you know that she is Milhaven's sister."

"I have not a thing against her," Christopher declared. "I dare say she guessed there was something wrong going on, and I believe that she came over to England to try what she could do to stop it, but no influence she could ever have brought to bear would have had the slightest effect upon men like Milhaven and Huitt."

The subcommissioner nodded.

"We have nothing against her," he admitted. "What are your plans, Mr. Sandford? Although we shall now never be able to bring that terrible fellow to justice, we realize, of course, that it was entirely due to you that his career was brought to an end."

Christopher's face for a moment was stern.

"That was my affair, sir," he replied. "I am only glad that I succeeded. I dare say you have heard the story. My father discovered him in the act of forging his name upon a sheaf of bonds—such a perfect forgery that no one in the world could ever have detected it. Huitt saw immediately that there was only one chance for him and he took it. He shot my father through the heart, left the bank by the back entrance and got away in the crowd. That was before he got mixed up with Milhaven, who probably knew nothing about it."

Amazing Skill.

"I heard the story," the subcommissioner acknowledged. "If it is of any interest to you, Mr. Sandford, I can tell you that you have rid the world of the most amazing forger who ever breathed. We have five handwriting experts attached to Scotland Yard, who have never in their history made a mistake. There is not a single one of them who is not prepared to swear that Huitt's signatures to the Jesson bonds and the Bott deeds and transfers are genuine! He was the greatest artist with a pen that ever lived. However, I suppose you are tired of talking shop. Let me hear your personal plans."

Christopher Sandford smiled.

"Well, the chief one that I can think of at the moment, sir, is that I am going to be married next Monday. After I am married I am going to settle down in England and see whether there is any place for me in first-class golf."

The subcommissioner had a sudden flash of memory. "You don't mean to say that you were the schoolboy wonder who was champion of Australia before he was 17?"

Christopher nodded.

"It was directly after that when the Sydney bank robbery took place and my father was killed. I dropped out of golf afterward, except for odd games. I have only played once in England. That was down at Sandywayes, and it pretty nearly cost me my life. Huitt recognized me! On the other hand, it also saved my life. I should have been killed if it hadn't been for Milhaven."

"How was that?" the subcommissioner inquired.

"Lord Milhaven was one of the strangest people in the world. He was capable of great cruelty, of immense generosity and of the strangest quixotism. Of course, I realize that he saved my life because of what my father had once done for him, but he would not tell Huitt that in plain words. He let him think that he was running all the risks of permitting me to remain alive because I promised to quality for England in the Walker Cup!"

The subcommissioner's eyes twinkled.

"What on earth will a man with a sense of humor like that do in Abyssinia?" he sighed.

Definitions of Poetry.

The article I published in this column some months ago on this subject has drawn some interesting letters. It appears that the excellent monthly magazine, the Forum, some six years ago, offered cash prizes for the best definitions; and in the issue of the Forum for August, 1928, these definitions were chosen as the best out of 268 that were submitted in the contest:

1. Poetry is a creation of word painting by a genius.—Fred Diehl, Pasadena, Calif.

2. Poetry is the expression of abstract thought in concrete terms by means of artistic metophor. Poetry brings near the far, makes the unfeeling the feeling, the inanimate the animate, translates the foreign into the vernacular—in a word, makes the insenuous the senuous. The imagination must be enlisted to understand and appreciate excellent poetry.—Leo Konopka, Philadelphia.

3. Poetry is a criticism of life in terms of beauty.—Mrs. George Pierce, Lakewood, Ohio.

4. Poetry is the spontaneous, instinctive interpretation of truth and beatuty, requiring the full, free play of the imagination, and finding exalted expression in material language designed to stir the emotions of men.—George L. Lyon, Pittsburgh.

A gentleman from Toledo suggests another definition:

Poetry is the crystallized emotions that spring from living.

All of these definitions are interesting and suggestive; but I think the definition that best combines truth truth and brevity is the four-word one by Wordsworth—

"Emotion remembered in tranquility."

My friend from Toledo also comments on the two passages I cited from the poet, A. E. Housman; I quote them again, because since that time, Mr. Arthur J. Carr, an undergraduate at the University of Michigan, has called my attention to a strange difference between the English and the American prayer-book version. Mr. Housman, emphasizing the undoubted truth that it is the language and not the thought of poetry that makes it great, has said that he himself is not at all affected by the following verse in the Bible version of the forty-ninth Psalm, but that he is overwhelmingly affected by the prayer-book reading. First the Bible, then the prayer book.

None of them can by any means redeem his brother,
Nor give to God a ransom for him.
But no man may deliver his brother; nor make agreement unto God for him.

Mr. Carr points out that in the American version of the Episcopal Prayer Book, revised in 1929, the passage reads:

"But no man may deliver his brother, nor give a ransom unto God for him."

Thus going partly (though not wholly) back to the Bible version.

When I showed the two copies of my Prayer Book to a colleague at Yale, he informed me that the alterations made in the Psalms by the recent revisers have given general dissatisfaction, although there are many fine things about the new book—notably the enrichment of the Communion service.

Tydings Calls On Roosevelt

He and Radcliffe Seeking Support for Canal Improvements.

In the midst of Maryland's warmest political campaign in recent years, Senator Millard E. Tydings yesterday accompanied George L. Radcliffe, Democratic nominee for Senator from Maryland, to the White House in an effort to interest President Roosevelt in improving the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal.

Before the meeting Mr. Radcliffe said at Baltimore that Maryland politics "inevitably" would be discussed, but neither visitor enlarged on this after the conference with the President. The latter has insisted he will take no part in elections this year.

Senator Tydings, who estimated the cost of the canal project at $3,000,000, said it is favored by the Navy, the Army and maritime interests. He said it would enable ocean-going vessels to save from 150 to 200 miles from Baltimore to the Atlantic.

The President was "very/sympathetic" to the project, according to the Maryland Senator, and has agreed to put it on the preferred list when PWA funds become available. Mr. Radcliffe is PWA regional director for seven States, including Maryland. He is opposed for Senator by Dr. Joseph I. France, Republican.

Reply to China Prepared Here

Purchase to Go Ahead, but U. S. Will Guard Other Nations' Interests.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt said yesterday that Secretaries Hull and Morgenthau had agreed on a reply to China's protest against the Administration's silver purchase program and that it would be made public simultaneously in this country and China after the Secretary of State had conferred with the Chinese Minister here.

President Roosevelt was in conference during the day with Hull and Morgenthau. Attesting the determination to go ahead with the silver purchases, a slightly increased rate of acquiring the white metal was revealed yesterday for the last month, as compared with previous equivalent periods.

The Administration feels that in following such a course it is carrying out the mandate of Congress expressed in the silver purchase act of last spring, which prescribed that the Treasury's silver holding be increased until its bullion reserve consisted of 75 per cent gold and 25 per cent silver.

Nevertheless, it is anxious to avoid any adverse effect upon the economic situation of any country. Its future purchases may be made with a view of avoiding the imposition of a drain upon the silver stocks of any other nation, especially those which, like China, are on a silver standard.

Economists, however, expressed the opinion that a policy might be difficult to administer. Purchases of silver anywhere, they held, would be reflected eventually in the holdings of any country with a large supply of the metal.

World's Highest Priced Book

Some Reflections Upon the Uniqueness of the Bible and Its Present Contemporaneousness; A Tribute to Sunday School Teachers.

By William T. Ellis.

Great Britain has recently paid Russia half a million pounds for a single copy of the New Testament—the "Codex Sinaiticus," written about the year 350. True; her title is not wholly clear, since the volume was stolen from the Monastery of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai, by Tischendorf, and by him sold to the Russian Emperor. The Archbishop of Sinai has recently asserted his right to the treasure. I saw the priceless volume in Petrograd; and while I was a guest of the Mount Sinai Monastery the monks showed me Tischendorf's own receipt for the book that he had borrowed, to study in Cairo. They also gave me complete disproof of the familiar tale that Tischendorf had rescued the book from the trash-heap and the fire.

But what a commentary upon the uniqueness and preciousness of the Bible, that in these hard times a great government should buy the oldest extant copy at the highest price ever paid for a book. It recalls the familiar picture of Queen Victoria, explaining to a visiting African chief that the Bible is the secret of Britain's greatness.

Sunday schools have entered upon a three months' course of "Studies in the Christian Life;" and today's lesson deals with "The Christian and his Bible." Timelier topic could scarcely be assigned; for only in "the Book" are we to find chartered the way out of present perplexities.

A Personal Confession.

Let me here give a personal testimony. This Sunday School Lesson which I have written continuously for more than a quarter of a century—penning it in all sorts of strange places; within sound of the guns of the World War; amidst the chaos of national revolutions; in desert tents and strange caravanseries; in old Jerusalem, and many other sacred spots of Bible lands; and wherever else my work as a newspaper correspondent has called me—is itself an illustration of the present theme. The Ellis Lesson is the oldest syndicated feature in American journalism. It has outlasted hundreds of brilliant series by far abler writers. Why has it, too, not "run dry" and petered out; but is today at its zenith of usefulness?

There is profound and pertinent significance in the answer, else I would not have intruded this personal experience here. I have all these years simply been borrowing from the Bible; so that something of the Book's ever-living vitality has been imparted to these Lessons. What I have written has been but a dim reflection of the Bible's teachings. I have tried to apply to the life of today the clear and eternal teachings of this most contemporaneous of all books. I am only a layman, with no theological training; and I have sought simply to impart to my readers the plain meaning of the Book that was written for ordinary folk. For the basis of all my writing is that the Bible is not a mystery book, not a crossword puzzle, not the vehicle of cryptic "keys," not a handbook of any cult, but a volume meant to be read and understood and practiced by ordinary folk. It is God's revelation of Himself and of His will for the common man.

A Word From the President.

This entire issue of the paper could be filled with tributes to the Bible, by statesmen, scientists, scholars, literary men, soldiers, and men and women of every sort of leadership in life. No other book can compare with it in its effect upon human life. Only a few weeks ago, President Roosevelt—who himself used to teach a Sunday school class—wrote me, "I am one who strongly believes that the Sunday school teachers have helped shape over the American character."

Within recent days there have been celebrations all over the United States in honor of the 2,000,000 Sunday school teachers, the men and women who have taught the Bible to their fellows. It has been good for the public to pause and consider the volunteer, unremunerated service of these teachers of the Bible. Only one book could command such a phenomenal display of tireless devotion.

Most of the people of the United States and Canada owe their ideas of religion, and their knowledge of the Bible to the Sunday school. This scant half-hour of weekly study has wrought wonders in human lives.

Mrs. Holmes Coming Here This Month

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Assistant Chief of the Protocol Division of the Department of State, Mr. Julius C. Holmes, will be joined the end of the month by Mrs. Holmes, who is visiting her parents, former Senator and Mrs. Henry Allen, at their home in Wichita, Kans.

Mrs Holmes, who as Henrietta Allen, was one of the popular members of the younger official set while her father was in the Senate, will be welcomed to Washington by her many friends here.

Mr. Holmes has recently come from Rumania, where he was attached to the United States Legation in Bucharest, and is taking the place of Mr. Jefferson Patterson who left a short time ago to assume his new duties as United States Consul in Breslau, Germany.

Talented Writer.

Mrs. Holmes and their small son, Allen, came to this country last winter to spend some time and Mrs. Holmes left the boy with his grandparents while she returned to join Mr. Holmes in Bucharest. They expected to go to Bulgaria for station, but plans were changed and Mr. Holmes was ordered here. Mrs. Holmes spent one day in Washington last winter, during which time she made arrangements for an interesting article she had written about Rumania to appear in the National Geographic Magazine. She comes by her writing ability naturally, for Mr. Allen for many years has published a paper in Wichita.

After spending several months in Rumania, Mr. and Mrs. Holmes returned to the United States in April, and the latter spent some time in Kansas with her family and then went to Wyoming, where she summered on one of the beautiful ranches in that part of the country.

There Mr. Holmes joined her for the month of August and then came to Washington to find a residence for his family for the next few years, during which time he expects to be at the Department of State. They will reside this winter at 3900 Connecticut avenue.

Senator to Go Abroad.

Former Senator and Mrs. Allen will probably accompany their daughter to Washington, as they are planning to sail from New York early in November for England, where Mr. Allen will collect material for a series of articles to appear in one of America's outstanding publications.

Mrs. Holmes will be a great addition to Capital society. She is a person of charm as well as good looks, and while in Rumania was hostess for the United States Minister to Rumania at that time, Mr. Charles S. Wilson, a bachelor. She has had experience in entertaining kings, queens, prime ministers and diplomats.

Pillar to Post

ANN WHITNEY met her first earl the other day—and was she thrilled! Ann is only 20 and bubbling over with joie de vivre. Since earls are not indigenous to Wesley Heights, meeting one was a romantic experience. Fortunately for her youthful illusions, the Earl of Airlie does not have a rabbit chin or talk through his nose. His military bearing came to him both through inheritance and training, for he is an officer in a crack regiment of Great Britain—the Tenth Hussars—as was his father before him. His features are perfectly chiseled, his eyes are blue, his dark hair marked with gray distinction at the temples.

• • • •

This set of handsome features was handed down to him also through many generations. There is an old Scotch song, "The Bonny Hoose of Airlie," which celebrated the charm of the earl's ancestors. The bonny lairds, members of the ancient clan of Ogilvy, were mixed up in the Stuart rebellion and the seat of the House of Airlie was then, and still is, Cortechy Castle, Kirrienuir. This place was the scene of Sir James M. Barrie's "The Window in Thrums," and the wife of the famous author was Margaret Oglivy, a member of the clan of which the present Earl of Airlie is the chief.

• • • •

HE also is a commander of the British Legion, and his war record is a distinguished one. Badly wounded, he lay in the snow of No Man's Land for many hours before he was rescued, and only his hardy Scotch constitution saved him. Not long ago he accompanied the Duke of Gloucester, third son of King George, upon a mission to Japan when the Mikado was decorated with the Order of the Garter.

• • • •

ALTHOUGH he ranks high in British nobility, the earl is not the least bit "Tory" in his views, being very much of a liberal and a great admirer of President Roosevelt. He believes the economic recovery of Europe awaits the restoration of prosperity in the United States, and while here he discussed these subjects with the President.

• • • •

HE was the guest of Ulric Bell, and "Sandy" Richardson, a native of Edinburgh, accompanied him on a tour of Washington. The latter said the earl was overwhelmed by the beauty of the Lincoln Memorial and would not leave until he had read every word of the inaugural address and the Gettysburg speech inscribed upon the base of Lincoln's statue.

A. L. Montgomery (Monty), who was born in the Hebrides and holds a Ph. D. from the University of Glasgow, enjoyed meeting the earl.

Sir Wilmot Lewis, who knew his father well, reminisced about the Tenth Hussars. But if you want a really enthusiastic description of the Earl of Airlie—ask Ann Whitney.

Couple Are United in Holy Name Church by Rev. John Dowling.

The wedding of Miss Mary Magdalen Dorr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August P. Dorr, to Mr. Michael Joseph Ready, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael R. Ready, was performed Wednesday morning in Holy Name Church by the Rev. John Dowling.

The altar and sanctuary were decorated with clusters of yellow chrysanthemums against a background of palms and ferns.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a fitted gown of white velvet made with full sleeves. A train of velvet hung from the shoulders. Her tulle veil was bordered with rare old lace and fell from a narrow coronet of braided velvet interwoven with pearls. She carried a bouquet of Killarney roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Louis Anzelmo attended her sister as matron of honor. She wore a gown of gold velvet with brown accessories and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Mr. James P. Spellbring, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Anthony C. Dorr, brother of the bride; Dr. James H. Earley, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Mr. James Bateman and Mr. John A. Gallagher, jr.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bridegroom. The couple were assisted in receiving by their parents. Mrs. Dorr wore a gown of dark green crepe with hat to match and a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Ready's gown was of brown velvet with hat to match and corsage of talisman roses.

The former United States Ambassador to the Argentine, Mr. Robert Woods Bliss, and Mrs. Bliss were hosts last evening at their home in Georgetown at the informal showing of films by M. Louis Bleriot, French delegate to the Congress of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale.

Originally the Alliance Francaise of Washington had planned to entertain a large and distinguished group of guests at the Carlton Hotel yesterday afternoon to view the films of the early development of aviation, assembled by M. Bleriot, who was the first man to fly the English Channel. However, the untimely death of King Alexander I of Yugoslavia, which put an end to the entertaining in honor of the delegates to the F. A. I. Congress, also canceled plans of the alliance because of the death at the same time of the Foreign Minister of France, M. Louis Barthou, who was honorary president of the Alliance Francaise.

Mr. and Mrs. Bliss, who were interested in the films, immediately offered their beautiful home, Dumbarton Oaks, for the entertainment. Owing to the more limited space of a private residence, Mr. and Mrs. Bliss invited about 150 guests whom they thought would be most interested in the films. M. Bleriot does not often exhibit these pictures because of their great age and fragility, but a number of the delegates to the air congress as well as Army and Navy people were present. After early studies in flying under Orville Wright, M. Bleriot broke all former world speed records. His record, which stood for a long time, was 35.5 miles an hour.

Luxurious Fall Robes in Silks, Woolens and Printed Silks Being Offered for Men

Smoke Jacket Is Replaced By Host Coat

Smart Cocktail Suits Are Finding Increasing Favor Here.

LOCAL DEALERS in men's furnishing and accessories are showing much that is new and interesting in luxurious robes for fall. Robes have a romantic history. Prior to our days . . . and those of our great-grandfathers, the robe was a mark of royal favor, bestowed only on those fortunate mortals who stood in the high esteem of their liege lord. The robe was not a garment in those days. When sumptuary laws made life miserable for men's wear dealers, and the guard dealt summarily with indiscreet purchasers.

Only those of "honorable estate" were privileged to wear the robe, and the same in a measure holds true today—but for different reasons.

The ancient knight, tired from the hunt or joust, returned home, slipped off his cumbersome armor and heavy, clumsy, leather jupon . . . and gladly surrendered his aching body to a steaming cup scented with marjoram or rosemary. Then into a soft, luxurious robe and heigh ho! for an evening's revelry.

The modern warrior goes out to sell or be sold and returns home in much the same state. He, too, eagerly seeks his tub and dons his comfortable robe. His robe will be a robe of honor this fall, for it is impossible to find anything that isn't rich, smart or colorful.

Woolens in Vogue.

In addition to the much favored silks, fine, soft, very close-woven woolens, bearing a distinct Scottish influence, are in vogue. Those seen are plaided and checked, in a manner reminiscent of Tattersall weskits and overplaid jackets so popular this summer . . . but with this difference: the grounds are shades of lemon-yellow, Nile green or burnt orange with checked patterns in brilliant reds, blues, browns, greens and blacks, blending into a harmonious whole. The wool texture strikes a strong masculine note and will find instant favor with the man who likes his things "horsey."

Printed silks with ripple effects, hit the high spots. They are extremely good in smoked pearl, a soft pinkish gray tint. Bellows pockets, belts that won't get lost, pleats at shoulders and embroidered club insignias are important style details.

In addition to robes, the lounge, cocktail or "radio suit" makes its Washington debut. Of silk, in checked or solid tones, the longish jacket and wide-cuffed trousers are trimmed in solid black. In the new lime-green, canary and burnt sienna, these garments should satisfy even the most avid male yen for color.

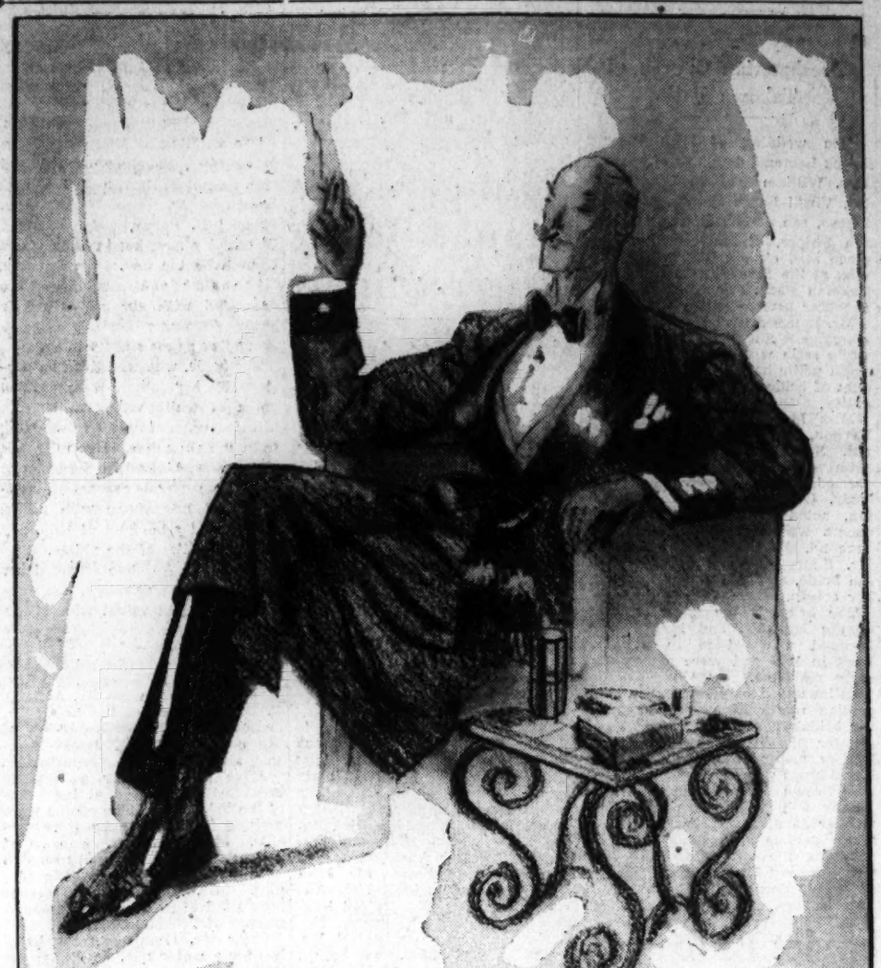
The Bi-Swing Robe.

A still newer note is the bi-swing robe, modeled after suits and overcoats of the same nature. These come in burly terry-cloth as does the wrap-around,—another steal from overcoatdom. This latter has no buttons, and a stay-put sash. The lapels of some and the sleeve cuffs boasted inch full polka dot facings in contrast to the body color.

The Varsity man still clings to his traditional flannels. Stripes seem on the wane, but solid tones of wine, blue and black with contrasting piping lead the style procession. Fraternity, club and varsity insignias are blazoned on the breast pocket. There is a new type of initial that is put on to stay on, merely by the application of a hot iron.

In keeping with the "odd" trend, smart cocktail suits, such as gray flannel jacket and shepherd checked silk trousers with robe to match, find more and more favor. These come in a number of interesting combinations, both in fabric and design.

Formal brother to the robe and lounge suit is the host coat, the old smoking jacket returning in new glory and luxury. The garment is usually of velvet or silk corduroy. It has a deep shawl collar in black, satin faced and is worn for a number of various occasions, besides lounging. These are smartest in midnight blue, wine or topaz. They've found great favor abroad, and will find their way here to those bachelor apartments that boast fireplaces and etchings.



Home from selling or being sold, the modern warrior in big business follows the lead of the ancient knight, and wraps his weary limbs at the end of day in a soft, luxurious robe. But, whereas the robe was once a mark of royal favor, today it's available to every man who seeks its soothing comfort.

Mme. Brosius, Noted Harpist, Recalls Past

Heard First Program at 6 and Decided on Her Career.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

HEARING Edythe Marmion Brosius, noted musician, talk about her harp, one is convinced her heart is truly attuned to the strings of her golden instrument.

And certainly no one looks the part of a harpist more than she. Of medium height, with delicately molded features and hair arranged Gibson-girl effect—bloused out, and held down by a knot on top—she recalls, in appearance, the days when beauty found its most forceful medium of expression in the harp. She reminds one, too, of countless half-forgotten legends woven around those who played the harp in Ireland and Greece in days of the past.

Mme. Brosius will present a half hour's program at the tea to be given tomorrow afternoon by the League of American Pen Women at their studio in the Burlington Hotel.

Sitting in her inviting studio in Georgetown yesterday she told something of how she came to be a harpist and recounted some of her early experiences.

Entranced by Harp Music.

"The first time I ever heard a woman play a harp," she said, "I was, literally, entranced. I had never heard anything so impressive, so beautiful, before.

"I was 6 years old then, but before the program was finished, I caught the arm of the woman who was with me and told her I wanted to play the harp. She was a nun at the Visitation Convent, where I was a pupil, and that was fortunate for me because she happened to be a harp teacher whose training had been of the best.

"Later, she spoke to my father about my studying the harp. He gave his consent on one condition—that I would refrain from crying, from then on, when I was homesick. I began my lessons on the harp soon after that, and never cried again until ten years later when I left the convent."

She wept then, she explained, because so many poignant experiences that later influenced her career were a part of her life at the Visitation Convent.

"For instance, I'll never forget I had the privilege of playing a piece, when I was not quite 7 years old, for Heinrich Scheucker, one of the famous musicians of Europe, who was at that time solo harpist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. I shall never forget what he said, when I had finished playing, 'That child will be a real harpist.'

Spent Most of Life Here.

"From then until now, the harp has been the answer to so many of my needs. In time of sorrow it has been the one thing that could give me lasting comfort. I can't conceive of what my life would have been without it."

When she was not quite 18, Mme. Brosius made her profressional debut in Washington. Later, she went to New York to study with some of the most famous harp teachers who have ever been in this country. Her training completed, she went on a tour of the United States, presenting programs in leading cities. Her playing of the harp attracted so much favorable attention from music lovers, she has appeared a number of times in the musical centers of America and has received glowing tributes from the most discriminating critics.

Correct Way To Use Powder Is Important

Seven Rules Will Help Women Who Employ Slapstick Method.

By Frances Mangum.

THERE'S MORE to powdering than meets the eye. Those who see it as merely one of life's little daily dozens to be undertaken in a slapstick style have no powder technique.

In view of the fact that about 98 per cent of all the women in the country use powder it does seem rather odd that so few of them know how to use it correctly. Most of them have one guilding rule, "Slap it on and smear it in!" Others wield the puff with a lick and a promise attitude.

Many beauty specialists say that powder is the leading make-up item because it furnishes the background for all the other cosmetics. For that reason it should be chosen and used with great care. Here are several fine points on powdering which it might pay you to keep in mind:

Choose Harmonizing Shade.

1. Choose your powder shade to harmonize with your natural skin tone.

2. Make sure that your powder is not the heavy, starchy type which clogs pores. Buy one which has been sifted through silk and which contains harmless ingredients.

3. Use a good powder foundation that spreads smoothly over face and neck. Be sure to apply only the thinnest film of this.

Use Soft Puff.

4. Never rub or grind the powder into your pores. Use a large, soft, sanitary puff and pat the powder on.

5. Be careful where you pat your first dab. If it's on the nose, the nose is doubly prominent. Receding chins, small noses are good pats.

6. Use two puffs, one to fluff the powder on, and one for the blending process.

7. Make sure that your puff is kept absolutely clean. Some women find little cotton pads highly satisfactory as they are always fresh and may be discarded after use.

Women Take Steps To Get Out Vote

New York City League Spurs Leaders.

New York, Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Feminine interest in politics is lagging. At least it seems that way, judging from the fact the number of voters registering recently at the New York City League of Women Voters was considerably behind the totals for this time last year.

Officials at the league were considerably alarmed by the apparent lack of interest shown by voters registering this year, and in order to arouse more interest, they sent telegrams to the league's various assembly district leaders and other volunteers, asking them to redouble their efforts in getting out registrants.

In addition to this measure, they distributed thousands of handbills, bearing the slogan, "representative government fails unless you vote."

What Today Means

"Libra."

IF OCTOBER 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m., and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m., and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

It might prove advisable not to allow the fact that a Suturday may cause you to be indifferent in business affairs, for there may be a possibility of your doing some good work that might produce satisfactory results. A friend may be responsible for some very curious results on this date, so be careful you do not allow yourself to be talked into a foolish undertaking.

Be watchful for a very temperamental person contacting you, and prove your tactfulness by handling them with kid gloves. It might be wise to discourage any boisterousness, if a friend is inclined to be so, to the discomfiture of others.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those endeavoring to win a mate, will find the day more harmonious if they confine their remarks to impersonal subjects, as there may be a decided predisposition for some people to be extremely sensitive.

If a woman and October 13 is your birthday, your greatest blessing probably is your sweet, unassuming disposition, and ability to get along easily with both friends and family. Your personality should prove a valuable asset in a position requiring you to come into close contact with people. Work similar to that of a librarian, tea-room manager, receptionist, or social worker should afford you splendid opportunities to make a reputation as well as money.

If a man and October 13 is your natal day, the fact that there is very little pretense in your make-up and your manifested sincerity in your business and social affairs, should inspire confidence that will help you in your business career. You should find congenial and profitable employment in educational, engineering or literary work.

Brushed Wool Popular Mode At Grid Game

Polo Shirt of Chamois Leather Comfortable and Smart.

IT WAS ALL brushed wool after the storm let up at the Virginia-Naval Academy football game at Griffith Stadium last Saturday. The drizzle stopped and off popped swagger Whitehall shelters, wrap-around weather-proofs, and gabardine trench coats to reveal glimpses of tweed, leather and wool beneath.

Outstanding among the comfortable, fashion-right garments seen when the topcoats were shed, was a polo shirt, a Cardigan jacket and a brushed-wool sweater. These are illustrated in pen-and-ink drawings below.

The polo shirt was made of chamois leather and lined with Tattersall patterned wool, the turned-up bottom, cuffs and neck being faced with the colorful lining material.

A vast variety of brushed-wool sweaters was in evidence. The one illustrated had a double front and back, and two leather-trimmed pockets. It was seen in white (alpaca type) brushed wool with the leather trim of pigskin.

Woolly ties of rabbit's hair and hose to match were other smart notes. Horizontal stripes and Argyle plaids were the dominant notes. The grounds of all were mostly dark gray, blue or black, with salmon, green, and other pastel overtones in the plaids and stripes. These all combine smartly with the tweedy ensemble, which seems to gain more and more impetus daily.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Case Cited of Older Woman Who Started Life Anew on $1,000.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I want to tell you what one woman has accomplished with very little money, and a great deal of time in which to be lonely. This woman had raised eight children, and each had gone his separate way. She was 55 years old when she was widowed and left with $1,000 in cash.

• • • •

She purchased a small house without conveniences on the edge of a small town, for which she paid $250. There is one-third of an acre in the lot. She grows a garden, and cans all the surplus products.

She preferred not to live with her children. So, instead, her children come to her in the summer time at a cost of $1 a day for each adult, and if anyone wishes to send a child, she gives complete care for $3 a week. She takes only her relatives.

• • • •

If times are hard, she gives rates to the family, and makes her home a distribution point for outgrown clothing in good condition. The result is that her children come to her and in addition to paying board, bring surplus provisions for canning. She has a happy household and the atmosphere is so enjoyable that reservations have to be made well in advance.

I doubt if, once she had started her venture, she ever had to buy a piece of furniture; or pay for a piece of repair work. Both sons and sons-in-law vie with each other in doing for her, and as the years slip by the grandchildren, too, are busy doing things for grandma.

• • • •

The winter months might be lonely for others similarly situated, but not for her. She busies herself in church work and in other civic activities, for the winter is her "free time."

BARBARA.

Challenge to "Martha."

DEAR BARBARA: There must be many older women, temporarily downed by circumstances, wondering what to do next, who will find in your recountal of the courage, resourcefulness nad self-reliance of this 55-year-old widow, a stirring challenge to go and do likewise.

• • • •

It must have been your hope, in writing this letter, that it would come to the attention of "Martha," whose request for guidance—on being left a widow with an income too small to permit her to keep her old home, and with no apparent alternative but to live around in the homes of her three children—was printed here Thursday.

• • • •

Surely, if one woman could so gallantly venture a new life in a home of her own with only $1,000 capital, "Martha" may venture as much on an assured, be it ever so small, income.

Capital Store Adds De Luxe Pastry Shop

Several Specials Listed for Today Include Malted Milk Cake.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SEVERAL MONTHS ago a large Washington store began plans for a bakery department. The management wanted to offer customers something extraordinary to give them goods they could purchase nowhere else. They heard of a nationally known baker whose reputation for fine pies, cakes, rolls and breads is scarcely rivaled. At their invitation he came to town to open the new shop.

Those who haven't called there yet have a treat in store for them. The shelves of delicious pastries have a "come hither" something about them that draws shoppers from all corners.

In order to introduce the shop to the public the master baker has prepared several specials for today only. One of them is a malted milk cake, made from the purest, most wholesome batter. This cake is highly recommended to all who enjoy good cakes and in particular to those who must guard against too sweet and too rich foods.

Children, for instance, who must partake sparingly of most cakes can eat a great plenty of the malted milk variety and still be none the worse for cramming. One of these large cakes is 49 cents—if you buy it today.

Another special is a coffee cake, made from the highest quality of butter, nuts and raisins. This will be delicious to serve with a piping hot cup of coffee. It, too, is 49 cents.

The third special is a large and luscious looking lemon meringue pie for 39 cents. The crust is light and crisp and all that a pie crust should be. And as for the filling, it literally melts in your mouth.

Cup cakes for 4 cents each must be tasted to be appreciated. There are some covered thickly with a chocolate fudge icing, piled high on the small yellow batter mound. In contrast to these are the "snow piles," cup cakes heaped high with creamy white icing.

* * * *

Ironing Board Pads Reduced.

Down from 69 cents to 39 cents have come the handy packages containing both ironing board pad and cover.

One of the first essentials for neat pressing is a neat board. Makeshift covers invariably wrinkle and puff in places and are likely to slide off.

These pads fit the board like the paper on the wall and the covers fit the pads in the same manner.

* * * *

A Barmaid Gadget.

A bonny barmaid, only a few inches high, is a big help in bartending.

"Bonny" here is a well-deserved adjective and barmaid refers to the drinkers' gadget which enables him to have one utility piece for doing many jobs. This so-called barmaid opens beer bottles, uncorks your wine, muddles your drinks, mixes your martinis; in fact, does everything but the actual drinking.

* * * *

Halloween Trimmings.

The next bee in the party bonnet is the occasion of Halloween. Most October parties are marked with striking and eerie decorations which tell of witches, ghosts and black cats.

There's a local shop which is specializing just now in all kinds of Halloween trimmings. There is a party box which contains not only the decorations for the party but the games to play as well.

When it's opened, it's a wonder that one small box can hold so much. There is a Jack o' lantern, first of all, and then some Jack o' lantern posters, some witch and moon cut-outs for hanging around the room or placing on the table, four rolls of crepe paper ribbon, witch head and hand cut-outs and garbs of slinky gray moss. Besides all this there are five games, a life and death race, feeding Jack, witch race, making Jack's face, and a witch fortune telling "wheel."

All of these things can be purchased separately but bought in bulk like this they cost about half as much.

Another nice Halloween set consists of a card table cover and four napkins, matching in design. Price 15 cents. There is also a larger cover, nine feet square, which may be used for the table or the wall. It costs 25 cents.

Besides all these things there are Halloween novelties, balloons, whistles, horns, and an assortment of other noisemakers, which are only 30 cents a dozen.

* * * *

Chocolate Marshmallow Roll.

A devil's food cake rolled round and round fresh marshmallow is called chocolate marshmallow roll. And is it good! It's one of those rich desserts that are so delicious with after-dinner coffee or suit so well at teatime.

A large roll—plenty for six people—sells for 30 cents in a local pastry shop.

* * * *

Cinnamon Sticks.

Those who prefer light delicacies for teatime will be enthusiastic over the cinnamon sticks selling now in a downtown store. They are 24 cents a dozen, and a dozen is ample for 10 people, as each stick is long enough to cut in half, and toast separate, thereby yielding 24 sticks in all. A good breakfast dish, too.

Two Experts to Conduct Post Cooking School

MISS DOROTHEA FRESEMAN, who will conduct a cookery column in The Post commencing Sunday, will assist at The Post cooking school in Washington Auditorium next week.

TWO HOME ECONOMICS experts will share the spotlight at The Post cooking school, opening in Washington Auditorium Tuesday afternoon. Miss Ruth Chambers, director of the school, will be assisted by Miss Dorothea S. Freseman, who joins the women's staff of The Post next week, to conduct a daily column on cookery and other phases of home management, using her pen name of Dorothea Duncan.

Miss Freseman will be introduced to the public at the opening session, Tuesday at 2 o'clock, and will be on the stage with Miss Chambers throughout the succeeding sessions, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons and Friday evening. Guests at the school will be invited to meet her in person, immediately before and after the sessions, and questions arising from the lectures may be submitted to her, to be answered in The Post.

Miss Chambers already is a favorite with more than 10,000 Washington women, who heard her at The Post school last year and applauded her as an outstanding authority in her field. Miss Freseman is widely known in the District and in Maryland. A graduate of the College of Home Economics at the University of Maryland, she took graduate dietetic work at the Fifth Avenue Hospital in New York and on its completion was associated with a nationally known manufacturer of food products. Her work included compiling new recipes based on advancement in culinary science, giving demonstrations to public audiences and presenting radio talks on varied phases of cookery. She comes to The Post from the Women's City Club of Washington where, as manager, she has been in complete charge of the domestic details of one of the city's foremost clubhouses.

Meat to Be Featured.

With these two capable authorities in command, The Post school will provide an intensive training course in home economics, a wealth of vitally important information crammed into four brief sessions, with lectures and demonstrations supplemented by personal advice to meet individual needs. Affiliated with the National Live Stock and Meat Board, Miss Chambers will feature meat cookery, but will deal with every other factor in a well balanced diet in her demonstrations.

The Post will be host to between 10,000 and 15,000 women at the cooking school and every preparation is being made to make this a gala occasion. Any successful party includes gifts for the guests, and manufacturers and merchants are cooperating to make everybody happy on this score. There will be gifts galore, expensive one to thrill the heart of any home maker; baskets of food, in liberal number, and filled so generously that the women who receive them will need help in carrying them home. No one will leave empty handed for there will be helpful recipe booklets and souvenirs for everyone present. The complete list of awards can not be made at this time because it is still growing. Each day swells the number of gifts, already totaling hundreds of dollars in value. Details of these awards will be announced in The Post Monday.

Kitchen to Be Set Up.

Every consideration for the comfort of the guests at the school is receiving the closest attention. The stage will be set up as a complete kitchen, arranged in full view of the audience. The public address system being installed will carry the speaker's voice to every seat in the hall. Street car, taxi and bus companies have been notified so that they can provide additional transportation accommodations for the thousands of persons leaving the auditorium. The school will begin promptly at 2 o'clock Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and at 8 o'clock Friday evening; at the conclusion of each session, the awarding of gifts will be expedited so that women who must return home to prepare the evening meal will have ample time for that duty.

Many attractive features of the school have not yet been announced; watch The Post daily for further, important details.

How to Keep Well

Migraine, or Sick Headache.

Migraine is one of the commonest and most distressing conditions that afflict mankind. The indisposition usually lasts two or more days and leaves the patient weak, exhausted and with a feeling of worthlessness. Attacks may come approximately once each month, although in severe cases they occur more requently.

The seizure is characterized by an intense pain that localizes in the forehead, later concentrating back or between the eyes. Occasionally the entire head is involved. During the height of the paroxysm flashes of light or bright spots may be seen. The pain is so intense as to render the individual practically helpless. Dizziness and ringing in the ears are common symptoms, followed by occasional mild delirium. Nausea and vomiting are usual accompaniments. The disturbance of the sympathetic nervous system is apparent as the patient may frequently complain of cold, and sweating of the hands and feet.

The disease is hereditary. The exact cause is unknown. It is, however, a true disease of the nervous system.

Many can foretell the onset even a day or two in advance. The individual seems to receive a definite warning or to recognize a set of relatively minor symptoms preceding the headache. Worry, excitement, overwork, sleeplessness, anger—in fact, any mental upset or strain may bring on the attack and increase its severity.

In spite of investigations as to offending foods, nothing positive has been determined in this field. A change of diet may entirely eliminate attacks for a month or two, only to be followed by a recurring sequence of equal or increasing severity. Cures are rare. Many cases have been improved by careful management, which includes regulation of diet, the use of a high fat diet (ketogenic) reduction in weight, the use of calcium in large doses, the use of protein injections, or the intravenous administration of sodium hyposulphite. Recently the use of chondriotin sulphuric acid has been tried with complete relief from subsequent attacks in 40 to 50 per cent of selected cases.

During an attack the room should be darkened and absolute quiet enforced. Ice bags or cloths wrung out of hot water may be used over the forehead. The patient should be temporarily starved although black coffee may be given and is sometimes followed by considerable relief.

Good body hygiene seems to offer the largest amount of hope in lessening the frequency and severity of the attacks. Many careful observers believe that over-eating is a prominent causative factor. Others reason that migraine is a nervous fatigue phenomenon and, to compensate for this, rich milk is advised between meals. Abundant outdoor exercise appears to help, as well as the correction of constipation.

Early Flights Seem Tame to Women Fliers

MELBA GORBY BEARD, erstwhile California aviatrix, moved here just in time for the Women's Air Meet, opening Sunday at College Park Airport.

"ONE FLEW EAST and one flew West——"

If Melba Gorby Beard and Alma Arelene Davis had planned deliberately to act out this ancient bit of doggerel, they could not have done better.

When Mrs. Davis had only 30 hours of flying to her credit she piloted an airplane from her home in Cleveland to Hollywood, Calif. Mrs. Beard, for her first long flight, flew from her home in Pasadena to New York.

Now both women pilots are in Washington to take part in the women's air meet which the Washington Women Pilots Association will present tomorrow afternoon at the College Park Airport.

That long flight from Cleveland to the Coast seems pretty tame to Mrs. Davis now. Since she made it, about three years ago, she has flown over an active volcano in Hawaii, won second prize in the first woman's National aeronautical race, and carried off the trophy at another race in which she was the only woman among a flock of men contestants.

Disappointed By Volcano.

"The volcano was terribly disappointing," Mrs. Davis said yesterday at the Mayflower. "The plane got very hot as we flew over the crater. That was the only thing exciting about it. I'll take a race in preference to a volcano any day." She ran restless fingers through a mop of brown curls and smiled like a mischievous little boy.

Speed has always appealed to Mrs. Davis, wife of a millionaire Cleveland meat packer. When she isn't flying she's out galloping on her favorite mount or dashing across the lake in her fast little boat. All money she wins in races is given to the Friendly Inn Settlement House in Cleveland.

"When I came in second in the First Woman's National Aeronautical Race in Dayton last August, I received $500 and so the Settlement House will soon have equipment to show 'talkies,'" she explained.

A more cautious type is Melba Gorby Beard, of Pasadena. The twenty-sixth woman to obtain a transport license, she has flown 200 solo hours. Although she has taken part in many races the sport is a more serious business with her than it is with Mrs. Davis.

Solo Hours Over.

Mrs. Beard began flying six years ago when she was a student at Pasadena Junior College. She has been at it ever since. Her favorite passenger is her husband, William Beard, a writer and a former instructor at California Institute of Technology.

Both Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Beard agreed that husbands make the finest kind of passengers. Neither wife has had to endure front-seat driving. When Mrs. Davis flew from Cleveland to Hollywood she was accompanied by Mr. Davis and her instructor. When Mrs. Beard flew from Pasadena to New York, Mr. Beard was in the plane. But both men will have to stay on the ground tomorrow while their wives do stunts over College Park Airport.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

EVEN BEFORE a child is old enough to understand a complete nursery rhyme, he can enjoy it if it is made into a game, and his understanding will develop with constant repetition.

Take, for instance, "Jack be nimble, Jack be quick, Jack jump over the candlestick." Repeat it with emphasis on the word "jump" and suit the action to the word. The 2-year-old will delight in jumping with you, and soon "jump" will be added to his vocabulary.

Then there's "Handy Spandy, Jack a Dandy, loved plum cake and sugar candy. He went into a candy shop and out he came, hop, hop, hop." After a few demonstrations the child will supply the word and do his own hopping.

The possibilities are almost unlimited. Next time you read through Mother Goose watch for the verses that can be dramatized. The child will enjoy these games and learn through them, and you will find greater pleasure in reciting the verses.

Prize Recipe For Sea Food Is Selected

By Susan Mills.

THIS WEEK'S recipes are valuable for sundry Friday or company dinners. Sea food lovers will want to add the contributions of Washington housewives to their scrap book.

First prize, $3, is awarded to Mrs. A. Hildreth Spilman, 1318 Thirty-fourth street northwest. Second prize, $2, goes to Miss Myrtle B. Drew, 207 Rhode Island avenue northeast, and Miss A. Adams, 1717 Columbia road northwest., apartment 207, received third prize, $1.

Their winning recipes appear in order:

Bohemian Fish Soup.

1 pound white fish
1 slice lemon
1 small onion
1 bay leaf
4 cups of water
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup sour cream
2 egg yolks
4 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon parsley

Use the portion of fish that is not suitable for frying or broiling. Any white fish may be used. Put the fish in a stew pan, add the water, sliced onion, bay leaf, and salt. Cook gently until the fish separates from the bones, then strain. Return the fishstock to stew pan, add the sour cream, bring to a boil and thicken with the flour and butter, beat the egg yolks and add to soup but do not boil after adding, add minced parsley and serve in cups. There should be three cup of stock before adding the cream, and the cream should be freshly soured.

Fricasee of Oysters and Mushrooms.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter, add 1 tablespoon flour, ½ finely-chopped onion, 1 cup mushrooms, broken in small pieces, 1 cup chicken stock or 1 cup oyster liquor. Cook 5 minutes and add 2 cups drained oysters. Reheat, season with salt, pepper, cayenne, and Worchestershire sauce. Serve with brown bread sandwiches.

Halibut Turbans.

Slice halibut and remove bones, roll into turbans, pour over them a mixture of lemon juice, melted butter, salt and pepper. Leave for an hour. Roll fast with buttered toothpicks, bake for 20 minutes. Arrange on platter with baked halved potatoes of potato balls in center. Garnish with lemon slices sprinkled with chopped parsley. Fried tomatoes or crisp fried strips of bacon may be served.

The honorable mentions are Mrs. Frank T. Hurley, Miss J. Tolbert, Mrs. George Clark, and Mrs. W. C. Senne. Their recipes will appear on this page next Tuesday.

When Queen Shubard drank her tea 5,000 years ago she didn't have the straws so popular today. She had a golden drinking tube, which is now on display at the University of Pennsylvania Museum, and which many persons believe was the ancestor of our present ice cream soda straw.

Four Million Families Given Help in August

Increase of 200,000 Made From July, Hopkins, Relief Chief, Says.

(Associated Press.)

The Relief Administration figures that 4,000,000 families—within 700,000 of the all-time peak recorded at the end of the CWA last April—were dependent on relief payments during August.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, said yesterday that the number of relief-supported families had jumped 200,000 from July to August. He intimated the load was still going up slowly.

The totals for September were not yet available.

Meanwhile, other relief officials pointed the way for more of these families to earn their relief allowances by doing work similar to that which they followed before the depression.

Model Record Suggested.

The works division of the FERA prepared to send out, within a few days, a model record system by which local relief agencies can keep constant tab on the trades and professions of people on relief and shape work relief projects to fit their normal occupations.

"We hope it will help the local relief agencies to provide work relief projects better adapted to the skills of the needy unemployed," explained Jacob Baker, chief of the work division.

Officials estimated that the 4,000,000 families which Hopkins reported on relief included 16,000,000 individuals. The number of single persons dependent on relief in August has not yet been calculated, but it was reported at 500,000 in July.

Cities Report Improvement.

Hopkins said at his press conference that preliminary reports from 110 principal cities indicated their relief rolls have increased very slightly from August to September, but that relief expenditures in these communities had declined from $49,308,000 in August to $46,276,000 in September.

He warned it was "very risky to draw any conclusions" from these seemingly more favorable figures. He pointed out that pay rolls coming immediately after the end of a month sometimes keep the monthly totals from reflecting conditions accurately.

More than a dozen studies being made by President Roosevelt's committee on economic security were listed in a statement handed out at the press conference. Unemployment insurance, provisions for old-age security, provisions for meeting the economic risks of illness, public works and general employment opportunities topped the list. Some of the other studies reported completed or under way concerned economic security for children, "survivors' insurance," relief, security for farmers, investment of reserve funds and Constitutional questions.

Nation of Aged Pictured Unless Births Increase

Cincinnati, Oct. 12 (AP).—An aging Nation, devoid of childish laughter, is envisioned as the United States of the future by Warren S. Thompson, of Oxford, Ohio, if the present ratio of births to deaths continues.

Thompson, representative of the Scripps Foundation for Population Research, told the Ohio welfare conference, meeting here, the only possibility of a change in the situation is an early and marked increase in the birth rate and resumption of immigration on a pre-war basis.

"And both," he added, "are improbable."

The speaker predicted that while in 1930 more than 9 per cent of the population consisted of children up to 4 years of age, by 1980 this would fall to 5.8 per cent.

IN the current dismissing of 100 employes at Federal Housing Administration, the officials point out that this was to be expected, as a larger force than was necessary for normal operation of the FHA was hired during the summer during the organization period.

The FHA executives emphasize that all appointments, except a few per diem workers, were made on a 90-day basis. As work in certain sections ceases or slackens, those employes are let out, along with others who have been found incompetent in the more permanent divisions, the officials declare.

Having reached a peak of 900 employes in the Washington offices, the FHA is settling down to a staff of about 800.

Meanwhile, the Federal Housing Administration has a very acute housing problem all its own. Despite the fact that the main offices are in the new Postoffice Building, one of the most magnificent in Washington, congestion is the worst of any department in the Government, not excepting some of the old war-time temporary buildings fringing the Mall. For several weeks the FHA has been promised more space in the old Southern Railway Building that is now occupied by branches of Internal Revenue, Justice, FCA and other units.

Rooms in the new Postoffice Building, occupied by FHA, that were designed for ventilation and light for three or four persons have from 10 to 20 working in them. Even storerooms without windows are crowded with workers.

Further aggravating the employes' discomfort is the general practice of overtime work throughout the FHA. Ten to 14 hours a day, Sunday and night work are the rule.

Here arises a paradox that none of the FHA executives seemed able to explain: Continuance of overtime work while at the same time reducing the personnel.

Radium sells at a price of about $70 per milligram, which is 1-28,000 of an ounce. A pound of it would cost considerably more than $30,000,000. Yet, strange as it seems, radium is constantly changing to something else—and eventually it turns into common lead.

Radium is the fifth in a series of disintegrating substances called the uranium-radium-lead series. There are ten members in the series, each of which (except for the first and last) is the product of one substance and the parent of still another. For example, the series is headed by uranium, a hard, white metal used in china painting and photography. In time this metal undergoes three changes, then becomes ionium. Ionium then slowly changes into radium. Radium changes into radon, a gas, which undergoes several other changes and eventually becomes lead.

The rate of change is very slow, however. Radium disintegrates at the rate of one part in 2,280 parts each year. That is to say, if you had a milligram of radium it would take 1,600 years for half of it to disintegrate. Then another 1,600 years would be required for half of the half-milligram you have left to disappear. At the end of 6,400 years you would still have 1-16 left.

Babe Ruth's home run after the third strike occurred in the fourth game of the 1928 series when Sherdel pitched a quick ball without winding up. The ball split the plate, and it caught the Babe napping. After much debate among players and spectators alike the umpire ruled it an illegal delivery. Babe knocked the next ball over the fence.

State Senator To Aid Youth

Aubrey Weaver, of Front Royal, Will Defend Boy in Party Slaying.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.). State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, of Front Royal, one of the leading attorneys in the Shenandoah Valley and a member of the Virginia board of law examiners, will assist in the defense of Walter Berry if the 21-year-old youth is indicted for slaying Gleaves Calhoun, 27, at or near a party on the morning of September 30.

Charles Winfield, veteran Broadway attorney, said today Senator Weaver would be associated with him in the defense of Berry.

The Rockingham Circuit Court grand jury will convene here Monday and Commonwealth's Attorney D. Wampler Earman will ask the indictment of Berry for first-degree murder. He said he will ask that the case be set for hearing at the October term of court if Berry is indicted. The case would be set for some time after October 22, as the docket is full.

Rumors were current that Mrs. Grace Calhoun, mother of the slain man, may engage counsel to assist Earman in the prosecution.

Calhoun, a construction worker, was shot as he left the home of Mrs. Kirby Lam, where a party was in progress.

A Sacrificial Slam.

Intelligent sacrifice bidding to prevent the opponents from getting the full value of the big hands which they have been dealt will pay big dividends in the long run. How pleasant it is to save a rubber for 250 or even 450 points, or to save the first game for 250 or less! And, in addition, every once in a while a bolt will strike from the blue and the team which has bid up to a game of Slam contract, expecting fully to go down one or two tricks, will find itself, through some lucky break or bad defense, fulfilling its contract.

On today's hand North and South, despite the fact that the West player seemed to be interested in a Slam, deliberately risked pushing East and West to that Slam in order to take what they thought would be a paying sacrifice at six clubs. Both North and South felt reasonably certain that they could defeat an opposing Slam contract if it was bid and knew that they could not be badly hurt at their own Slam contract. When the opening lead was made and the Dummy went down, Declarer knew immediately that he had a play to fulfill his contract, and he finally succeeded in making it, despite a very fine defensive play by East.

East, Dealer

West was faced with quite a problem on his opening lead. He finally decided—albeit erroneously—that there was a better chance of winning tricks in the spade suit than in the heart suit, and he accordingly led the spade Jack. South won the trick with the Ace in Dummy and led the club Queen. East did not cover, hoping South would play for a drop, but from the bidding the Declarer realized that the finesse seemed indicated. After the club Queen held the trick, the diamond 8 was led from Dummy. East very brilliantly went up with the diamond King, knowing that if he ducked and his partner's Ace was forced out, his own diamonds would drop on the second and third rounds and some discards would be set up for Dummy's losing hearts or spades.

After winning the trick with the diamond King, East shifted to a heart, which South won with the Ace. South now trumped a low diamond in Dummy, and returned to his own hand with the club Ace, naturally dropping the King. Despite East's fine play of the diamond King at the third trick, South knew from the bidding that West was marked with the diamond Ace. His only hope of fulfilling the contract was therefore to set up two diamond tricks on the next lead. He had two possible plays: One was to lead a low diamond, hoping West's Ace would drop, but this play South immediately discarded, as he knew that East, with four diamonds to the King or the King-Jack, would not have jumped up. The other play offered a better chance of success. If West had the guarded Ace, East could very well hold the lone Jack. South accordingly led the Queen of diamonds from his own hand. West's play, of course, was immaterial. Actually West covered, the trick was ruffed in Dummy, and East's Jack dropped. South now had the good Ten and nine of diamonds left and on these two cards he discarded Dummy's two losing hearts and was then able to claim the balance of the tricks. Instead of being on the wrong end of a one-to-three-trick penalty, North and South suddenly found themselves with 240 points below the line and 500 above.

Hagerstown Set for Fair Next Week

79th Annual Event Will Open Tuesday With Added Features.

Races With Pari-Mutuel Betting Included on Program.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 12 Spl.). Arrangements have been completed for the seventy-ninth annual Hagerstown Fair opening Tuesday, President Andrew K. Coffman announced today.

The fair will include all features of previous years, with the addition of races with pari-mutuel betting.

A horse show will be held, with Ambrose L. Foremen, of Hagerstown in charge. There will be a 4,000-bird poultry show, with an exhibit of 500 birds being brought here from the York (Pa.) Fair.

The annual dog show will be held Wednesday, in charge of James T. Wolfe.

Three trotting and pacing races and one running race will be held Tuesday and Wednesday. Fifty horses already have been entered.

The local Izaak Walton Chapter will present a fish exhibition.

Attendance Record Set At Frederick Fair

Frederick, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—About 10,000 persons attended the Frederick Fair today. It was the final day, and, instead of harness and running events, motorcycle races and dare-devil stunts featured by a head-on collision of automobiles driven at 40 miles an hour, performed on the track.

Managers are jubilant over the success of this year's exhibition, which will show the largest profit since 1930. Today's crowd was the largest for ten years.

Ralph Greenlief, 32, Uniontown, Pa., was arrested and charged with passing three counterfeit $10 notes. Two other spurious $10 notes and a counterfeit $5 note were found in his pockets. Fifteen concessionaires and lunch stand operators picked out Greenlief from a line-up of nine prisoners at the jail as the man who passed the bogus money. He was turned over to George Almoney, of the United States Secret Service. The local authorities believe Greenlief might be connected with the gang that passed several thousand dollars of spurious money at the recent Allentown (Pa.) Fair.

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Dr. O. K. Burnette was chosen president of the Culpeper County Medico-Dental Association, at a meeting in Dr. J. L. Stringfellow's offices.

Dr. H. B. Lacy, dentist, was named vice president, and Dr. W. R. Colvin, also a dentist, secretary-treasurer.

Routine business was followed by open discussion of scientific points. Committees were appointed for the next meeting in December at the Piedmont offices, Culpeper.

Burkittsville Man Will Use Shingles Half Century Old

Middletown, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—The old adage that youth improves with age might well be applied to roofing shingles, according to Newton Horine, of Burkittsville, who is preparing to roof a building which he is erecting at his home with oak shingles 45 years old.

The shingles in question were cut from timber grown on Mr. Horine's mountain land nearly a half century ago and are still in an excellent state of preservation. Ever since the shingles were sawed they have been kept dry and have become so hard that nail holes must first be punched in them before they can be used.

A special machine, perhaps 150 years old, owned by Benjamin Rohrback, of near Burkittsville, will be used for punching the holes. This machine, generally used many years ago, has been idle for many years.

Along the Tri-State Trail

with

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor

Virginians may be a little "puffed up" at this time and for good reason—President Roosevelt will visit the State twice next week and on each occasion deliver an address. October 19 he will be in Roanoke for dedication of the Veterans Hospital and the following day at Williamsburg for the installation of John Stewart Bryan as president of William and Mary College.

The county fair is still a paying proposition. At least that is the idea one gets on reading press reports from Frederick, Md., telling of the largest "last day" crowd in the history of the Frederick Fair. Hagerstown, Md., the scene of a fair that has received widespread publicity over a long period of years, will next put on its exhibition—starting Tuesday.

The old adage that "Romance never dies" appears to have been borne out this week at Bristol, Va., when an 88-year-old Confederate veteran took unto himself a wife 46 years his junior.

Farmers of Carroll County, Md., are "in the money" again. County Agent L. C. Burns announced that checks totaling $53,587.46 are being mailed to 1,200 farmers as subsidization for reduction of wheat acreage under the Federal crop reduction plan.

Things are "booming" at Fredericksburg (Va.) State Teachers College. The institution has enrolled more than 700 students, a record, and four new buildings are nearing completion on the campus.

Yesterday was Columbus Day and the memory of the man who blazed the trail across the Atlantic to a new land was not lost in the minds of William Pace Lodge, Order of Sons of Italy, of Cumberland, Md., who held a rally in honor of the event last night. It was the 442nd anniversary of the discovery of the New World by the intrepid Columbus.

Tribute Paid Robert E. Lee

Women Gather at Lexington for Meeting of Board of Foundation.

Lexington, Va., Oct. 12 (AP).—Women of 32 States, members of the National board of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, joined with Washington and Lee University in Lee Chapel today in paying tribute to the memory of the Confederate chieftain.

The visitors heard President Francis Pendleton Gaines, of Washington and Lee, read the minutes adopted by the faculty of the university upon the death of Gen. Lee.

Following this brief annual service, at which Gen. John A. Lejeune, of Virginia Military Institute was a guest, the 36 attending members of the organization interested in preserving and restoring Stratford, birthplace of the Lees, heard Dr. Gaines describe the factors influencing Lee's decision to come to Washington and Lee.

Today's service was one of the most impressive ever held in the chapel built by Lee where he and members of the family now are buried.

The gathering marked the opening of the annual council of the Robert E. Lee Foundation.

Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, of Greenwich, Conn., president of the board, presided at Stratford's society meeting. Present also were Mrs. O. B. Brown, of Berlin, N. H., chairman of the program committee; Miss Helen Knox, of New York City, treasurer of the board, and Mrs. I. N. Lewis, of Greenwich, Conn., secretary of the board. Other prominent women in attendance included Mrs. Cazenova Lee, director of the foundation for the District of Columbia; Mrs. Alfred I. DuPont, of Delaware, and Mrs. W. S. Lovell, of Birmingham, Ala., a writer.

Pilgrimage Set By Methodists

Maryland Group Will Visit Sams Creek Today.

Mount Airy, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.). A pilgrimage tomorrow to Sams Creek, Carroll County, where Robert Strawbridge founded Methodism in Maryland shortly after settling in that section in 1760, will conclude the Methodist Sesquicentennial program now under way in Baltimore.

The pilgrimage to Sams Creek, near here, will be made to conduct a dedicatory service at which the address will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Ferrier Hulme, delegate from the United Methodist Conference in Great Britain. Mrs. Laura Dempster Gronemeyer, great-granddaughter of Robert Strawbridge, will unveil a memorial on the property which now stands on the site of Strawbridge's first church.

John Green Assails Rule Of New Deal

Clarendon Republican Opens Campaign for House Seat.

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—John Locke Green, of Clarendon, Republican candidate for the House of Representatives from the Eighth Virginia Congressional District, addressing a large gathering of voters in Municipal Hall here tonight declared that "the American people are at the cross-roads."

Mr. Green pointed out that the roads represent two lines of Government—one the road built by Americans for Americans, which leads to security, happiness and opportunity, and the second, the Moscow road, which may lead to chaos and frightful conditions.

Mr. Green declared the political campaign is not between Republican and Democratic parties, but is "the American people's fight against an un-American form of Government—against socialism, communism and anarchy." He further characterized the present political battle as one of supporting the principles of Washington against Richberg; Jefferson against Tugwell; Henry against Frankfurter, and Madison against Taussig.

Party Leaders Cited.

Declaring he pinned his belief in the Constitution, Mr. Green added that in his stand he was not alone, but found among his company such Democrats as Carter Glass, Harry Flood Byrd, Bainbridge Colby, John W. Davis, Alfred E. Smith and James A. Reed, who have not taken wholeheartedly to the principles of the "New Deal."

Speaking of his opponent, Representative Howard W. Smith, Alexandria, the Republican candidate declared that "several years ago it would have made little differencee whether I or Judge Smith represented you in Congress. Today it makes an immense difference if you are not in favor of the New Deal and what it stands for. By his votes in Congress, he has strayed far from the reservation of the Democratic party and the people who elected him on the platform of the party. He has aided the 'Brain Trust' in each of its undertakings."

Concluding, Mr. Green said:

"Awake, you Virginians who are Americans. Your most priceless possession is in jeopardy. Now is the time to say 'Halt!' to these Constitutional marauders. Two more years of an 'aye-aye' Congress will prove too costly a price for slumber."

Rallies on Smiths Island.

Crisfield, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—The first gun in the Somerset County Republican campaign for 1934 was fired today at Smiths Island, when a series of meetings were held. All of the Republican nomineees of the county gave brief talks. Harry T. Phoebus, of Princess Anne, Senatorial candidate, was present.

The first meeting was held at Tylerton. Then the party went to Ewell. A visit to Rhodes Point was made also, thus covering every community on the island.

Capt. Barr's Reward Divided

$1,000 Offered for Information Leading to Discovery of Missing Virginian Split Four Ways by Judge.

Orange, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Division of the reward money offered for information leading to the discovery of Capt. Albert Barr, who was missing for several days after an accident to his car at Wilderness Run July 29, has been made by Judge Alexander T. Browning, of the Orange Circuit Court, sitting without jury.

Of the $1,000 offered, Stark Kendall received $500; Edward Johnson, colored, $200; Harry W. Ellis, $200, and John M. Knighten, $100.

Capt. Barr, driving alone from Washington to his home in Keswick, plunged over the bank at Wilderness Run and disappeared. The car was found but no trace of the driver was seen. His identity was made known when Capt. Barr was reported as missing and the car identified as the one he had driven.

Three days after the accident the law firm of Perkins & Battle, of Charlottesville, was authorized by Capt. Barr's family to offer a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the recovery of Capt. Barr. The accident took place on Sunday, July 29; the reward was offered on the following Tuesday and not until Friday was Capt. Barr found walking in the road near Lahore. He was returned to his home by Stark Kendall, who was one of the seven claimants of the reward.

Edward Johnson, another of the claimants, was said to have seen Capt. Barr and left him to go to telephone the message to those in charge of the search. Mr. Ellis claimed to have been the first person to recognize Capt. Barr and to report that he was in that neighborhood.

In view of the fact that there were so many claimants for the reward, the money was turned over to the circuit court for settlement.

Final Court Ruling Asked On Coblentz

Decision on Quashing of Fraud Indictment Sought.

Appeals Tribunal Will Decide if Charges Are to Be Revived.

Annapolis, Oct. 12 (Spl.). — The Maryland Court of Appeals today was called upon to pass final judgment on a decree of the criminal court of Baltimore quashing an indictment charging fraudulent corporate misrepresentation against State Senator Emery G. Coblentz, Frederick County, as president of the Central Trust Co. of Maryland, which, with several subsidiary banks, was involved in a crash two years ago.

Coblentz was indicted in Howard County on 20 counts.

The case was removed to the Baltimore Criminal Court, where Judge George Solter sustained a defense demurrer quashing the indictment and as a result Coblentz was freed, whereupon the State appealed.

The indictment in general charged the former bank president with signing certain public statements which he knew to be fraudulent. The State contends the Howard County indictment was legally sufficient.

The case was presented to the appellate court by Attorney General W. Prestone Lane; his assistant, G. C. A. Anderson; State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor, of Baltimore, and State's Attorney James Clark, of Howard County. Lee Weinberg represented the defendant.

20,000 to See Maryland Battle Slightly-Favored Annapolis Team

Nation's Eyes Turn on Midwest and Pacific Coast Grid Tests Today

Stop Borries! Is Cry of Terrapins

Maryland Pins Hopes on Fleet Widmyer and Guckeyson.

"STOP BORRIES!" Harking to this command of its coaches and realizing full well that its success will be measured directly by the degree in which it is able to check the gallops of Navy's clever backfield star, Maryland University's Football Team last night was primed for its invasion of Annapolis today.

Twenty thousand fans will throng Thompson Field at Annapolis for the battle, with all seats reported sold. Navy, once regarded an overwhelming favorite, is now a receding choice in view of its own injuries and recent impressive practice sessions by Maryland.

The game was scheduled for 2:30 o'clock and will be preceded by a contest between the Navy Plebes and Georgia Military Academy, starting at 1 p. m.

The Navy-Maryland series began back in 1897 and eight games have been played, the Old Liners registering their only victory in 1931, 6 to 0, when the teams clashed in Griffith Stadium, Washington.

No other back in the Navy's lineup does Maryland fear except Borries whose brilliant running has dominated the play of the Midshipmen this season even as it did last year when he was one of the outstanding backfield men of the East.

Maryland Men Marked.

Maryland will be carrying two marked men into the battle. The speed of Earl Widmyer, fleetest runner on either team, already has been heralded far and wide and Navy will be intent on checking his sweeping runs today. But equally intent will Navy be on halting the multiple efforts of big Bill Guckeyson, who kicks and passes as well as runs.

Navy's hopes received a slight shock yesterday when Bill Holson, regular right end, was injured in the final practice, necessitating the drafting of Hubert Short from the B squad.

Indications are that Navy will pit against the Maryland line a set of forwards who are bigger and more experienced than the Terrapin linemen, but the edge in the backfield, if any, appears to rest with Maryland, which boasts in Widmyer and Guckeyson a pair of backs more versatile than any Navy will produce.

Fortified in Punting.

Maryland is well fortified if the game develops into a punting duel. Despite the long-distance booting of Bill Clark, which has given Navy an edge over every foe this season, Maryland is anticipating no handicap in a punting battle what with Guckeyson revealing in recent practices that he can send the ball spiralling for distances that average 50 yards.

Gormley and Sothoron will be clearing the way for Maryland's running backs, Widmyer, Guckeyson and Sachs. Widmyer is not expected to start the game, but will be inserted by Coach Jack Faber at the first sign of weariness by Navy when his speed will be utilized.

During the past five days, Coach Tom Hamilton of the Middies has emphasized Navy's defense against forward passes. With three members of the Maryland backfield adept at passing, the Old Liners are expected to rely on this method of attack in no small degree. Against St. John's last week, Maryland completed 14 of 17 passes attempted.

Roosevelt High Is Beaten by Gonzaga

Fumbles Prove Costly to Hefty Rough Riders in 9-0 Defeat.

OUTWEIGHED approximately 10 pounds per man, a well-coached little football team from Gonzaga High School fought its way to a 9-to-0 victory over Roosevelt High's gigantic eleven in the new Roosevelt Stadium yesterday afternoon.

Gonzaga scored all its points in the third quarter. After Roosevelt fumbles had put the Rough Riders back on their own 5-yard line, Andy Oliveri, substitute center, snapped the ball high over the head of Half Back Grayson Isbell's head, and over the end zone line for a safety for Gonzaga.

Gonzaga scored again barely five minutes later, Half Back Jimmy Boyle sprinting 13 yards around his right end for a touchdown after a running and passing attack had taken Gonzaga down the field 32 yards. Boyle's pass over the middle of the line to McCoy was good for the extra point.

Unable to Use Power.

Easily the biggest high school team in the city this season, Roosevelt nevertheless was unable to convert its physical power into offensive power.

On the part of Roosevelt, it must be said that Gonzaga scored its points against the Rough Riders' second and third string men.

Roosevelt literally fumbled itself into defeat. Added to this consistent fault was poor generalship on choice of plays, the quarterback calling for passes, all of which grounded four times on fourth down when either in his own territory or only slightly in Gonzaga's half of the field. In the final quarter, Roosevelt got its running attack under way for a stretch, with the regulars back in the game, and made a first down on the Gonzaga 20-yard line.

Roosevelt, however, called for a pass on first down and followed it up with three more, all of which grounded. Gonzaga on the other hand, displayed a resourceful choice of plays.

Pass Is Intercepted.

The safety came after Farrell, substitute Roosevelt quarter back, had intercepted a Gonzaga pass deep in Roosevelt territory. A fumble by Spivok, combined with a bad pass from center set Roosevelt back on its own 5-yard line and then Oliveri committed his faux pas.

A fumble, recovered by Thibideau, Gonzaga guard, on Roosevelt's 20-yard line, led to the touchdown. A 25-yard penalty set the Purple back, but Grace got loose for 25 yards around left end. Boyle passed to Grace, who was downed on the 13-yard line, and then Goyle spun around his right wing for the touchdown.

Fordham 6-0 Victor Over Boston

22,000 See Eagles Fail Time After Time in Shadow of Goal.

NEWTON, Mass., Oct. 12 (AP).—Repulsing two fourth-period scoring threats, once by a matter of inches, Fordham's fighting Rams barely managed to protect their early lead to gain a 6-0 triumph over Boston College in a hard fought game before a capacity crowd of 22,000 spectators here today.

Joe Maniaci, of Lodi, N. J., fleet-footed Fordham halfback, gave the New Yorkers their lone touchdown in the first six minutes of play when he shot off tackle and raced 64 yards down the sidelines for the score. Twice he shook off would-be tacklers on his brilliant run.

Place Kick Is Wide.

Andrew Palau, substitute quarterback, rushed on the field to attempt the placement for the extra point, but his kick was wide of the uprights, and the scoring was over for the day.

From the middle of the second period to the final whistle, the Eagles threatened constantly with their effective passing attacks, but each time they were within striking distance of the Fordham goal line the Rams turned them back.

Just before the half ended, B. C. was forced to yield the ball on Fordham's 6-yard line, but they got even farther than that when they marched 70 yards to within 4 feet of the Rams' goal line midway through the last period. Curran's fourth-down buck missed a first down by 4 inches and the Rams kicked out of danger.

Long Passes Missed.

With Paul Flaherty, Tom Brennan and Bob Curran sharing the passing honors, the Eagles completed 10 out of 28 passes for a total of 160 yards. B. C. gained 132 yards with its running attack and piled up 13 first downs to Fordham's 4, only 1 of which came in the last three periods.

Only One Other Bid.

The potentially powerful Rams were kept so busy on defense that they did little or no attacking during the second half. Their only other scoring bid came in the second period when Maniaci took a double lateral from Tony Sarausky and Steve Sorota to run 55 yards, only to be called back for stepping offside on B. C.'s 43-yard line.

School Elevens In Virginia Battles

Andrew Lewis to Oppose Roanoke; Glass Plays John Marshall.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Six of the "Big Twelve" State High School football teams swing into action this week-end in the race for championship honors in the Virginia High School Literary and Athletic League, a conference sponsored by the University of Virginia extension division.

The strong Jefferson High School eleven, of Roanoke, entertains Andrew Lewis, of Salem, tomorrow, while John Marshall, of Richmond, journeys to Lynchburg for an important contest with Glass High School's 1933 league champions. Petersburg visited Hampton today for the only other conference game scheduled.

Non-Conference Games.

The other league members, Lane, of Charlottesville; George Washington, of Danville; Thomas Jefferson, of Richmond; Maury, of Norfolk; Woodrow Wilson, of Portsmouth, and Newport News engage in non-conference contests.

In previous championship games, Jefferson topped John Marshall, 14 to 13; Woodrow Wilson downed a crippled Petersburg team, 6 to 0; Glass outpointed Thomas Jefferson, 7 to 6, and the little Hampton eleven walked over Maury, 6 to 0.

Harry Russell Wins Chester River Golf

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Harry S. Russell won the golf championship of the Chester River Yacht and Country Club by defeaturing James S. Kreeger, jr., 10 and 9.

By Eddie Brietz
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

FOOTBALL fans looking for the biggest bargains in pyrotechnics today must start at Pittsburgh and travel due west.

There will be plenty of heavy firing in all sections, but the Big Berthas will be concentrated in the Midwest and on the Pacific slope.

The high spot, of course, is the Southern California-Pitt game at Pittsburgh. Coach Jock Sutherland's well-drilled Panthers are ready to roar. Pitt is off to a good start and expects to strike its real stride in the Trojan game.

Jones' Eleven Aroused.

On the other hand, Howard Jones' big eleven is burned up over a piece in the school journal that the sons of Troy have gone Hollywood. Also, they are keen to avenge last week's licking by Washington State and they mean to show all concerned tomorrow that, although some of them may part their hair in the middle, they don't tuck their handkerchiefs up their sleeves, &c.

Another classic is in store, a mashie shot farther West, when Notre Dame, beaten by Texas, and Purdue, trimmed by Rice, hook up at South Bend. Defeat for either will just about ruin the season for Elmer Layden and Noble Kizer, the rival coaches.

Northwestern Invades.

Michigan, another team which took it on the chin from a supposedly inferior foe last week, has a chance to show it was all a mistake by beating Chicago in one of two games in which Big Ten title hopes are at stake.

Ohio State tackles Illinois in the other. The Buckeyes have one conference victory under their belt, but this game will be the first venture of the Illini against Big Ten opposition this year.

Penn Plays Yale.

Next to the Temple-Indiana intersectional game at Philadelphia, the Eastern spotlight centers around the Penn-Yale contest at New Haven, where the Blue, with a week of intensive drilling behind it, expects to improve last week's showing against Columbia.

Harvard will entertain Brown. Navy is host to Maryland. Williams visits Princeton for a look at Fritz Crisler's hundred-and-one backs and Columbia expects to develop its already polished attack against Virginia Military at New York.

Contests In South.

Georgia Tech-Duke, Georgia-North Carolina and Clemson-Kentucky will test the strength of the Southern and Southeastern conferences in the leading Dixie engagements, with the Oklahoma-Texas and Southern Methodist-Rice matches featuring the day's play in the Southwest.

Washington and Oregon meet in a Pacific Coast Conference game. California, stinging under last week's defeat by little St. Mary's, looks for an easier time against Pacific.

Mrs. Small Advances To Golf Tourney Final

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Mrs. Fred T. Small, defending champion, advanced to the final in the women's fall golf tournament of the Cumberland Country Club yesterday by defeating Mrs. Elizabeth Dixon by the score of 2 and 1. Mrs. Small will play the winner of the match between Miss Elizabeth Heintz and Mrs. Abram Goodman for the championship.

Mrs. Lee R. Meyers went to the finals in the second flight by defeating Mrs. Albert W. Keight, 6 and 5, and will play Mrs. R. E. Murray, who won over Mrs. Howard T. Robinson, 2 up in 18 holes.

Virginia Tech Primed for W. & M.

Three Changes Are Made in Line-up for Tilt at Richmond.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Virginia Tech will pit the hard drives of its running attack tomorrow against the aerials and laterals of William and Mary at Richmond Stadium in the twelfth football game between the two institutions.

Frankly wary of an Indian eleven that is expected to be at the peak, Tech bolstered its line by returning Tris Huffman, veteran tackle, to the strong side, and Jim Copenhaver to center. George Sodaro, a stocky sophomore who can carry the ball as well as block, likely will replace Jack Carpenter at half back.

Severe Test Seen.

The game is expected to be a severe test of the alertness and skill of Tech's secondary defense, which to date has been rather shaky against open style of play.

The starting line-up for Tech: Dave Thomas, left end; Tris Huffman, left tackle; Red English, left guard; Jim Copenhaver, center; Norman Ochs, right guard; Ben Dodge, right tackle; Red Negri, right end; Duncan Holsclaw, quarter back; George Sodaro, left half back; Capt. George Smith, right half back; Foots Dickerson, full back.

Maryland Frosh Defeat Virginians

Rally for 2 Touchdowns in Last Half; Win, 13-6.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Outplayed during the first two quarters, Maryland's freshman team rallied in the second half and scored two touchdowns to defeat Virginia's first-year eleven, here, this afternoon, 13 to 6. The lone touchdown registered by the young Cavaliers followed a blocked punt midway the second period, Ring falling on the ball as it rolled across the goal line.

The visitors, in the second half, soon jumped into a one-point lead. Wolfe crashed through to block a punt and Surgent pounced on the ball on Virginia's 3-yard line. De Army plunged through tackle for the score and McCarthy place-kicked the extra point.

Play in the final period was entirely in Virginia territory, Just before the whistle sounded, Wheeler, substituted for Egan, intercepted a pass and raced 20 yards for a touchdown.

Two Crucial Contests Slated In Virginia State Title Chase

RICHMOND, Oct. 12 (AP).—Two headliners on far distant programs will share the Old Dominion's interest tomorrow as Richmond's football team goes west to battle Emory and Henry at Bluefield, and Virginia Tech moves east to Richmond to fight it out with William and Mary's Indians.

As becomes such crucial contests in the State championship race, both games will be played on neutral soil, although each of the four belligerents will have their well-wishers present to spur them on to victory.

William and Mary, after 11 futile trys, will try again to upset the Virginia Tech team, which perhaps will enjoy a slight edge over the fast Indian combination.

Hurt by Injuries.

At Bluefield, the Spiders of Richmond University, seeking to show at the Wasp's expense that last week's victory over Cornell was no flash in the pan, will find a determined, although injury-riddled Emory and Henry team which will miss sorely the services of Mark Kegley, one of the State's outstanding backs, and Alderson Propps, an end.

All of the fans' interest was not centered in the Old Dominion, however. Their well wishes went with the Washington and Lee Generals, who moved on to Charleston to battle West Virginia's Mountaineers in an effort to earn a victory this year instead of the tie of last season.

Cadets Play Columbia.

Virginia Military Cadets, twice beaten by substantial scores, but thriving under punishment and giving indication of a reasonably strong team before the season ends, seemed destined to take another beating at the hands of Columbia's strong eleven.

Virginia's Cavaliers faced St. Johns, whose nuances were crippled by inability to play freshmen against the Southern Conference member. The Cavaliers ruled the favorite.

Bridgewater's Eagles, overwhelmed by Catawba in their opening battle, moved North to Washington to oppose the American University eleven, while Hampden-Sydney's Tigers had a battle in prospect against King College under the lights at Bristol tomorrow night.

Randolph-Macon's Yellow Jackets beat the rest of the teams to the run by playing a night game with the Newport News apprentice school team at Newport News tonight.

G. W. Downs Citadel by 26 to 0

Leemans Leads Attack as Colonials Run Up Score Near End.

Capital Team Is Held to One Touchdown in First Half.

WITH Leemans and Plotnicki making the principle gains, George Washington University's eleven coasted to a 26-to-0 victory over Citadel College, of Charleston, S. C., last night at Griffith Stadium. The visitors went down fighting and surprised by holding the Colonials to one touchdown in the first half.

First period—George Washington took a 7-to-0 lead over the Citadel in the first three minutes of their gridiron clash here tonight. Five plays after the opening kick-off, Tuffy Leemans, the Colonials' brilliant half back, shot off his left tackle and galloped 30 yards to a touchdown. Harry Deming place-kicked the extra point.

The scoring play followed a pass from Leemans to his right end. Bill Parrish put the ball on the Cadets' 30-yard line after Leemans had ripped off a first down on the G. W. 47-yard line on two off-tackle thrusts. A 30-yard drive following an exchange of punts found G. W. on the Citadel 15-yard line as the first quarter ended.

Score—G. W., 7; Citadel, 0.

Second Period—Plotnicki had replaced Leemans at left half. The Bulldogs from South Carolina braced, and G. W. was still on the 15-yard line after three plays. On the fourth, Plotnicki shot a pass intended for Vanderbrugge, who replaced Parish, but it fell incomplete in the end zone. Citadel kicked and Plotnicki was downed on his own 45.

Dale Prather, G. W.'s big full back, then went through the middle of the line on a spinner and ran 45 yards over the goal line but the play was called back and G. W., penalized 15 yards for holding. After an exchange of kicks, Thompson, Citadel's substitute end, recovered Plotnicki's fumble on Citadel's 42-yard line, but two passes by Faulkner were incomplete and Hall kicked over the goal line. Plotnicki and Prather began a running attack and G. W. had advanced to midfield as the half ended.

G. W. had made eight first downs and Citadel none.

Score: G. W. 7; Citadel 0.

Third Period—An uninterrupted 65-yard march at the start of the second half ended with Leemans skirting his left end for 5 yards for G. W.'s second touchdown. Deming's place-kick was good for the extra point. The drive was featured by a 14-yard run by Leemans, a 9-yard pass to Benefield by the versatile Leemans and a 13-yard run also by Leemans to the 9-yard line. A penalty put the ball on a 4-yard line and then Leemans went over. Citadel penetrated to the G. W. 20-yard line shortly afterward on a 35-yard run by Johnson and a 25-yard pass to Andy Hall by Al Faulkner.

Score—G. W., 14; Citadel, 0.

Hanken and Vanderbrugge set Citadel back on its own 40 with deadly tackles and Hall kicked out on the 25. Leemans made first down on the 42 and flipped a pass to Hanken, who downed on Citadel's 34. Another pass from Leemans to Kavalier put the ball on the 20. Two plays netted 2 yards and then Leemans broke loose around his right end on a pretty 18-yard run for the third touchdown. Deming's kick was blocked.

Score—G. W., 20; Citadel, 0.

Fourth period—George Washington had penetrated to the Cadets' 35-yard line as the fourth quarter opened. On the first play of the period, Ben Plotnicki went to the 17-yard line and, on the third, he

Coach Plans Wide-Open Battle

Rivals Choices at 9 to 5; Father McDonough Is Paid Honor.

By Lewis F. Atchison
(Post Staff Writer).

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Georgetown paused tonight, bivouacked amid the towering skyscrapers that are New York.

Tomorrow the Hoyas fling themselves against the stone wall that Chick Meehan has erected at Manhattan College. It is the day's most important game in Gotham and a crowd of 40,000 is expected to jam Ebbet's Field, Brooklyn.

They will come to see Jack Hagerty attempt to regain for Georgetown the glory it lost when Lou Little bade adieu to the Hilltop and cast his lot with Columbia.

Highly Confident.

A more confident Georgetown team never before set foot on Father Knickerbocker's soil. The Hoyas are overflowing with a confidence inspired by Hagerty's leadership. Speaking over a Nation-wide radio hook-up, Hagerty tonight predicted a victory for his men.

It is significant that tonight the leading sports writers of the East and coaches of the metropolitan area gathered at the Center Club to honor Father Vincent S. McDonough, S. J., the grand old man of Georgetown athletics and the man who supported Lou Little to the fullest extent during Little's regime at Georgetown.

Spirit Heartening.

To many it was the signal for a new deal for sports at the Jesuit school. Georgetown alumni attending the banquet expect great things, almost miracles, of Hagerty this season, and look for even more next year. The spirit and enthusiasm of the '34 eleven, a vast improvement over last season, has been heartening. It is the token by which the school's supporters gauge next season's gridiron prospects.

Getting back to tomorrow's game, the odds are 9 to 5 in Manhattan's favor though the majority of sports writers agree that "breaks" will be a deciding factor in the contest.

Many Triple Threats.

The field will be knee deep in triple-threat men, with Joe Bavarine, Georgetown's captain, Cubby Parcells and Don Gibeau in the backfield. But Manhattan tops the Washington eleven in this respect with four. Of these Joe Gallagher, 200-pound, 6-foot end, is the most dangerous. Gallagher usually plays defensive end and offensive back. Tomorrow, however, Meehan has shifted him to the backfield for the entire game.

In Red Welch, Bill Downey and Joe Tabor, the Jaspers boast a trio of backs who can run, kick and pass with the best of them. All are slated to start.

Wide Open Football.

As far as Georgetown is concerned it will not be a case of punt, pass and pray. The Hoyas have a definite plan of battle—wide open football—a reckless daring game.

A victory tomorrow may provide the momentum that will send the Blue and Gray crashing through to the most successful season it has enjoyed since 1929. Defeat may cast an ominous gloom over the squad and send it reeling into the depths of despair. But Georgetown is confident.

Arlington Gridders Open.

The Arlington 135-pound grid team will open its season tomorrow on the Arlington field at 2:30 p. m., facing the Southeast Boys' Club. Games can be booked with Arlington by calling Dick Reed at Met. 6339, during the day, or Clarendon 321, evenings.

V. P. I. Frosh Winners.

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—The Virginia Tech freshmen defeated Washington and Lee's first-year eleven here today, 13 to 6.

The Cabin John A. C. will play its final baseball game of the season at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow, when it meets the Takoma A. C. at Cabin John.

Army Claims Part In Dizzy's Success

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 12 (AP). Some share in the success gained by Jerome H. "Dizzy" Dean as pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals is claimed by the United States Army. The latest recruiting poster received at Fort Sam Houston displays a portrait of the famous pitcher with the notation:

"The Army trained him."

A story published in the Recruiting News in 1931, relating how Dean's discharge from the Twelfth Field Artillery at Fort Sam Houston was obtained by a St. Louis baseball scout after seeing Dean pitch for the Fort Sam Houston team, in 1930, is also being republished.

Second place was awarded to Mott Baird, pointer, owned by Capt. Woodward, U. S. A., of Baltimore. Pitted against Mott, a Grand National entry of past years, was Duke of Rookwood, young Irish setter belonging to S. Groome Eareckson, of Clarendon, Va.

Awarded Third Place.

Several fast pointers belonging to out-of-town participants over-ran the course and were declared out-of-bounds. Their owners are trying to find them.

The trials were held on the Hal Dawson Farm, near Potomac, Md.

St. John's Confident Despite Loss of Stars

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Head Coach Tody Riggs led his St. John's College gridders out of Annapolis today for Charlottesville, Va., to do battle against University of Virginia tomorrow.

Though the Johnnies' plans were somewhat disarranged by Virginia's eleventh-hour refusal to allow freshmen to play, they nevertheless expect to make a strong showing against the Cavaliers.

Two regulars and several reserves came under the ban and they remained at home. The regulars are Leonard Delisio, Washington boy and crack end, and Len Stankiewicz, guard. Riggs was uncertain as to their replacements, but announced the following as a probable line-up:

Mrs. Clark Conquers Lily Harper for Title

By Dave Herman.

THE Middle Atlantic golf crown rests upon the brow of a golfing mother—Mrs. David Clark, of Army and Navy Country Club.

She won the championship, emblematic of supremacy in Virginia, Maryland and the District, yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club by defeating 18-year-old Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., 3 and 2, in the finals.

Mrs. Clark triumphed because she was steadier with her woods and irons, a more polished putter, and cooler in the crucial moments.

Was Also Medalist.

Thus Mrs. Clark, a former Virginia champion, became one of the few Middle Atlantic titleholders who also had been a medalist.

Mrs. Clark never trailed her opponent during the 16 holes the match lasted. She won four holes to Miss Harper's two, and needed par in for an 81 when she closed out her 104-pound rival, last year's Middle Atlantic finalist, on the sixteenth.

The first nine was exceedingly tight. Seven of the holes were halved. They halved the first three in 4-4-5. Mrs. Clark was trapped on the second, while on the same hole Miss Harper was guilty of three putts. Mrs. Clark took the lead with a beautiful par 5 on the treacherous, winding 472-yard fourth. Here she was on in regulation figures, while the Virginian, to the right with her third, later missed three shots to wind up with an 8.

Shoots Par 4.

Miss Harper evened the match by winning the fifth with a par 4 to Mrs. Clark's 6 when the District golfer's second caught a trap and she three-putted. They halved the next four in 5-5-5-4 to round the bend all even, Mrs. Clark going out in 43, Miss Harper in 44.

The little Virginia miss had her troubles on the stretch, while Mrs. Clark grew stronger. On the tenth Mrs. Clark clicked off her par 4 for a win, as Miss Harper meandered into a trap on her second. Mrs. Clark went 2-up by taking the eleventh with a par 3, laying her iron 6 feet from the pin. Miss Harper was in the trap on her tee shot and dubbed her second.

Lays Approach Dead.

Fighting back grimly, Miss Harper took the twelfth by laying her approach 2 feet from the pin for a par 4 to Mrs. Clark's 5, but on the next hole she knocked her second on a high hill to the right of the green, missed her niblick approach, and lost with a 6 to her rival's 5. They halved the 210-yard fourteenth in beautiful par 3s, Miss Harper making an approach to within 2 feet of the pin after being to the right of the green on her tee shot, and Mrs. Clark sinking a 6-footer after being short with her drive.

A ditched tee shot that resulted in a penalty set off the spark for a poor 7 by Miss Harper on the 446-yard fifteenth, which Mrs. Clark won with a splendid par 5.

Halve Final Hole.

Both were on the sixteenth comfortably in 3, and Mrs. Clark barely missed her par 4 to halving the hole in 5s.

Mrs. Clark, the mother of three young children, is the wife of Lieut. Comdr. David H. Clark, of the Naval Department. She is one of the few District golfing mothers who has made a successful comeback.

Sale of Dodgers Reported Likely

Norris Declared Seeking Control of Club.

Brooklyn, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Brooklyn Eagle says today that James E. Norris, of Chicago, is negotiating for the purchase of the Brooklyn Dodgers, of the National Baseball League, and that "chances are very good" that control will pass to him during the winter.

Norris was in Brooklyn three weeks ago, the Eagle said it learned, conferring with Stephen McKeever and the Ebbets heirs, who jointly own the club. It was not believed an agreement was reached then, but that the basis was laid for further conferences.

Joe Turner Reduces Scale to $1.65 Top

Joe Turner, ring impresario of the Auditorium, yesterday clipped prices for his boxing shows to a 55 cent-$1.65 scale in lieu of the $1.10-$2.20 prices formerly in effect. The new prices will go into effect Monday night, when the program will be headed by a 10-rounder between Frankie Hughes and Mickey Serrian.

Turner also promoted the Phil Zwick-Benny Victor encounter, formerly carded as an 8-round semi-final, to a cofeature spot on one end of a double windup. Joey Green and Sammy Seaman, bantamweights, have been signed for an opening six-rounder.

Pat Dengis Victorious In Annual Marathon

Portchester, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP).—Pat Dengis, of the Stonewall Jackson Club, won the annual Columbus Day Marathon from Columbus Circle in New York to Portchester in 2 hours 31 minutes 30 seconds.

Eagles to Play Bridgewater At Central

Seek to Redeem Selves for 33 to 0 Defeat by Hampden.

WHILE all the other local colleges are plying their grid warfare on foreign fields, American University holds the local spotlight today with its game with Bridgewater College at Central Stadium at 2:15 p. m. Last year Bridgewater handed the Eagles a 2-0 defeat.

With the 33-0 defeat at the hands of Hampden-Sydney still rankling in their minds, the Eagles will take the field today to try to redeem themselves in the eyes of Coach Young, who was sadly disappointed in the showing of his charges.

The Eagles played like world beaters for the first 30 minutes of the Hampden game but cracked wide open in the second half and the Tigers scored five touchdowns.

Hansborough Shifted.

Young has altered his line-up slightly, placing Wade Hansborough at left end. Hansborough, 165-pounder, played well in last week's contest and will strengthen the weakest part of the line. Bob Britton has earned the place vacated by Hansborough. Britton played for a quarter in the Hampden game and showed up well.

A change in the backfield also was necessary, with Ralph Winslow still on the shelf with a badly sprained ankle. Red Mallard, an excellent kicker, will play in Winslow's place.

U. S. Track Stars Win Over Italians

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—A team of United States track and field athletes today defeated a touring Italian group headed by Luigi Beccali, Olympic 1,500-meter champion, eight first places to six, in an international meet at Yankee Stadium contested before an estimated 20,000 Italian-Americans celebrating Columbus Day.

With the weather more suitable for football than track and no one to push him, Beccali failed to lower the universal standard of 3:48.8 for 1,500 meters, breaking the tape in the slow time of 4:02.

Joe McCluskey, former Fordham star and Olympic steeplechase, provided the feature by out-sprinting Umberto Cerati in a shoulder to shoulder finish of the 3,000 meter run.

Duke, Ga. Tech Top Southern Grid Card

35,000 Are Expected to Attend; Georgia Faces North Carolina.

RICHMOND, VA., Oct. 12 (AP).—Duke's Blue Devils, hoping to hurdle the stumbling block on which their National championship hopes were crushed a season ago, will battle an invading Georgia Tech eleven at Durham tomorrow in the topnotching engagement on the Southern Conference sports program.

There'll be one championship game—that between South Carolina's Gamecocks and the Wolfpack of North Carolina State at Raleigh tomorrow night—but it'll have to play second fiddle to the interconference struggle between Duke and the strong Tech eleven coming up out of the Southeastern circuit.

A sell-out crowd of 35,000 persons, the largest ever to witness a game in Duke's big stadium, has been promised for the battle in which "Corky" Cornelius, the Blue Devils' hard-running back, will match his speed and deception with Georgia Tech's line-cracking Jack Phillips, the 200-pounder who helped upset the Wademen down at Atlanta, 6 to 0.

Duke Victory Predicted.

The Devils will fear, too, Tech's vaunted aerial attack but most observers predicted that Duke would gain revenge for the whipping of a year ago and help cut down the victory margin which Southeastern teams enjoy over members of the parent Southern circuit.

In another outstanding game North Carolina's Tar Heels, defeated by Tennessee and undismayed, will match a great team with Georgia's Bulldogs at Athens. The Tar Heels in Capt. George Barclay will show one of the South's outstanding linemen. He'll call the play and then step out to take his place in the interference.

The other inter-league game will find the Southern entry, Clemson, on the short end of the betting, but with many an expert willing to risk the prediction that the Tigers, magnificent against Georgia Tech and Duke in losing battles, would upset Kentucky's Wildcats at Lexington.

Washington and Lee's Generals, defending an uncrossed goal line and spurred on by victories over powerful Kentucky and Maryland elevens, will carry an unusually strong team to Charleston in an effort to whip West Virginia. Not as strong as they'd like to be offensively, the Generals will pin their hopes on a 200-pound line which has failed to budge before the onslaughts of other foes. They left for Charleston without Duane Berry, star sophomore guard, who was injured last week.

Virginia Elevens Active.

Virginia Military was conceded no chance at all against Columbia's Lions at New York.

The Carolina State-South Carolina game will knock out of the running one of two teams well liked in preseason forecasts. State, expected by many to be the big obstacle in the way of Duke's Devils, hasn't caught on to the Notre Dame system as rapidly as Hunk Anderson has hoped, and may find the Gamecocks, cochampions with Duke a season ago, too tough to handle.

Va. Avenue Boys Archery Winners

Opposite corners of the city today hold the archery championships of the Municipal Playground Department, decided yesterday at Georgetown Playground. The boys' title was won by the Virginia avenue team, from Eleventh street and Virginia avenue southeast, while the new girl champions hail from Chevy Chase Playground, Forty-first and Livingstone streets northwest.

A comparison of the winning scores shows that the fair archers averaged 2 points better than the victorious males, the figures being 412 for Chevy Chase and 398 for Virginia avenue. Boys from Hamilton Playground finished second and Georgetown third. Runner-up in the girls' contest was Rosedale, tallying 308.

Individual matches, confined to the high scorer on each girls' team in the competition, will be shot today.

Episcopal High Will Oppose Augusta

Complete Preparations for Today's Game With Long Practice.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—Episcopal High applied the finishing touches to its preparations for tomorrow's State Title game with Augusta Military Academy by going through a long offensive drill this afternoon at Hoxton Field. The most intensive practice session thus far this season, it lasted until dusk.

Coach Cardwell is by no means satisfied with the way the Cherry and Black execute its offensive and he had the entire backfield squad running through several new plays.

Complete Long Passes.

Flick Hoxton and Al Wilson did the forward passing, completing several long heaves to the ends and backs, in scrimmage against the second stringers.

Late in the workout the varsity gave some time to perfecting its defensive maneuvers. The construction of a pass defense for the A. M. A. attack came in for special consideration.

Nevada Upsets St. Mary's, 9-7

Cashill's 30-Yd. Drop-Kick Margin of Victory.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—University of Nevada's snarling wolfpack delivered a crushing 9-to-7 defeat to the powerful St. Mary's College team here this afternoon on the eve of the Gaels' departure for New York to meet the Fordham Rams in an intersectional contest.

An angling, 30-yard drop-kick from the toe of Tom Cashill, Nevada center, beat the Gaels.

It was St. Mary's first setback of the 1934 season. After the Gaels' spectacular victory over the powerful University of California Bears last Saturday, the contest had been regarded as nothing more than a workout for St. Mary's.

Humbled Last Year.

Smarting under a 61-to-0 defeat by St. Mary's last year, the Nevadans got off to a flying start with a touchdown in the first period against Slip Madigan's starting second-string line-up.

Hastily substituted after the first touchdown, St. Mary's regulars punched over a score in the second quarter and took a 1-point lead when Kellogg converted the extra point.

The teams then fought on an even basis until the closing minutes, when a long pass placed Nevada in scoring range.

tore through right tackle for a touchdown. Jenkins missed his placekick attempt for the extra point.

Citadel received the kick-off, but was forced to kick. The Cadets were going down fighting and forced G. W. back 21 yards on two plays to G. W.'s 22-yard line. G. W. was just emerging from its own territory for the first time after Plotnicki's touchdown as the final whistle blew.

Final score: G. W., 26; Citadel, 0.

Equipoise in Next Start on Oct. 31

Leg Ailment Forces His Withdrawal Today.

New York, Oct. 12 (U.P.).—C. V. Whitney's handicap king, Equipoise, will not be seen under colors in the metropolitan area again this season, Tom Healey, trainer of the 6-year-old son of Pennant-Swinging, announced today.

The veteran campaigner was forced to decline the issue in the New Hyde Park Handicap at Jamaica tomorrow because of a slight filling in one of his legs.

Equipoise's next start will be in the Narragansett Special at Pawtuckett, R. I., October 31, Healey said.

75 Golfers Qualify.

Seventy-five golfers have qualified for the annual fall tournament at Anacostia Park. The qualifying rounds will be continued today and tomorrow. The leading qualifiers entered thus far are W. W. Seay, W. H. McCarr, H. Bowers, Ed Stolark and W. Bradstreet.

A Crusty Old Gent Looks at Football Schedule and Speaks His Mind

By Paul Gallico.

Yale vs. Pennsylvania—Football with the purity seal. Two old-fashioned schools with quaint theories that bona-fide students well up in their scholastic standing should play football instead of illiterates whose sole connection with the school is the color of the jersey they wear. Ought to be a pleasant but rather loose afternoon of play and a good demonstration of what real student football is like—terrific zeal and effort and about 40 per cent football efficiency. I prefer Yale because the boys were good enough to score a touchdown on Dr. Lou Little's Columbia team last Saturday.

Manhattan-Georgetown—A little school sprouting its first real football whiskers. Dr. Chick Meehan, released from N. Y. U. a few years ago after his treatment had been found just a trifle too effective and the authorities decided to go in for a little gridiron underemphasis at that seat of learning, is busy bringing Manhattan into the football limelight. Even at this stage of the game Manhattan ought to be one touchdown better than Georgetown. Business of stringing along with the builder-upper.

Harvard-Brown—Harvard ought to win this one again. It used to be a gag about little Brown beating big Harvard until it developed that Brown was turning out one of the strongest teams in the country. Harvard is one school that gets good football players somehow who are able also to read and write. One of them even turned out to be a Phi Beta Kappa and a brilliant quarter back as well, so it can be done. My pick is Harvard 13, Brown 0. Brown lost to Harvard, 12-6, last year, and it is doubtful whether the Rhode Island squad is much improved.

Pittsburgh-Southern California—Good old-fashioned football game. West Coast critics call the Trojans a chamber of commerce team. Pittsburgh has a big stadium to support and one of the strongest teams in years. Southern California took a surprise beating from Washington State, 19-0, last week. Pitt is supposed to be ready for revenge for Rose Bowl humiliations. Don't pay too much attention to those Coast upsets. The boys lay for one another out there and you never can tell who is going to be primed for you in an early season game. West Coast teams always play well when they come East, the snappy weather Cal. on this one and I won't be convinced until the last Trojan is Cal. on this one and I won't be convinced until the last Tropan is interred. Should be a very rough and bruising party. Glad I'm watching and not playing. Southern California 27, Pittsburgh 10. Nice of me to give Pitt a touchdown.

Notre Dame-Purdue—Otherwise known as Layden vs. Kizer—a couple of former Notre Damers cheerfully cutting one another's throats via two beaten football teams. As long as logic is prevailing in this article, it doesn't look as though Layden has had time to organize as yet. Purdue the winner, 14 to 7.

Temple-Indiana—Temple, another modest little flower that suddenly has yearned for the warm sunshine of National football publicity. A nice brick school on the outskirts of Philadelphia, coached, of all things, by Pop Warner, of Stanford fame. Last year the boys had a little difficulty in mastering the intricacies of Poppa's plays. This year indicates a marked improvement in the mental and physical make-up of the candidates. Temple to beat Indiana by 14-0.

Stanford-Northwestern—Return game between the teams coached by Tiny Thornhill and Dick Hanley, Hanley from Chicago. They played a tie last year. Poor Mr. Hanley is out on the Coast in the Stanford Stadium against the best football team, probably, in the country. That licking that Columbia gave them in the Rose Bowl last New Year's Day was what Stanford needed. Stanford to win, 21-3.

Heard on the last trip West for the World Series—don't pick against Ioway. One of the best teams in the Middle West. All right, I won't. Iowa to beat Nebraska by 27-10. Another hot tip—don't go against any of those Texas teams this year. They're all supposed to be red-hot. That looks good, too. Texas to beat Oklahoma 19-17. Thanks for listening.

Happy Go Scores an Easy Victory in Columbus Day Handicap Sprint at Laurel

Colt Piloted To Win by Wright

Bit of Sorrow Is Only Other Favorite to Triumph on Card.

By Walter Haight.

HAPPY GO went places. In fact, Happy Go went places faster than any of the six horses answering the bugle call for the Columbus Day Handicap, yesterday's outstanding race at nearby Laurel. Places, in this instance, represented the 6 furlongs of race track between the starting barrier and the judges' stand.

Carrying the majority of the betting money invested by a crowd of 8,000, Happy Go, which gets his name from his daddy, Happy Argo, bounced down the stretch some two and a half lengths in advance of Dust Girl, and three more lengths ahead of Giggling. Happy Go's victory was one of the two spots on the program to bring relief to the hard-hit favorite players. He paid a $4 mutuel, which most of the handicappers believed was "stealing" money.

Wright Rides Double.

Wayne Wright, who rode a double for the day, had the mount on Happy Go, and except for a few yards at the start he was leading the pack all the way. Miss Patience was first to leave the gate but her lead was short lived. Happy Go, once in stride, jumped out in front and Wright pumped him along the backstretch with daylight showing between the colt and Giggling which had pulled up to second.

Rounding the far turn, Giggling began to slide back and Dust Girl took off the role of chief challenger. Under punishment from Jockey Donny Meade she made a game attempt to catch the now flying Happy Go. However, the colt drew away entering the stretch. Wright glanced over his shoulder to note the positions of his rivals and then coasted his charge to the finish line. The field of six was strung out in Indian fashion crossing the wire.

Bit of Sorrow Scores.

Bit of Sorrow, an E. R. Bradley representative, was the only other favorite to score, finishing a length and a half ahead of a field of juveniles competing over the six-furlong course. Star Chase, a recent graduate from the maiden ranks, was second and Nell Barton, which pressed the early pace, was third in a field of eight.

Four horses finished noses apart in the hectically fought finish of the first race, a 6-furlong dash for maiden 2-year-olds. When the judges had unscrambled them, Mrs. J. B. Bond's Inscription was placed first, Gifted Lady, the favorite, second, and Voladale third, with Spinster getting fourth call. The remainder of the field of 14 were distanced. Inscription paid $8.70.

Mose Lowenstein, veteran Kentucky horseman, sent out his My Counsellor, a rank outsider paying $47, to win the 6-furlong second race. The Bostonian gelding came from behind a brisk pace to snatch a head decision over Some Good. The latter held Sang Froid, one of the early leaders, in the show position by two and one-half lengths. Postscript, the public choice, was fourth after a rough trip.

Bokie B. Surprises.

James Arthur's Bokie B., with Carl Hanford riding cleverly, lasted to defeat 11 other Maryland breds in the 6-furlong third race. Next away Taunton, staging a belated rally, was second, while Campagna, coupled in the Bond entry and an odds-on favorite, was third. Bokie B. paid $30.40.

Jester B., racing for the Audley Farm, finished powerfully under Joe Kacala's strong hand ride to win the mile and a sixteenth sixth race. He paid $5.90. Manager Bill was second, a half-length back of the winner and in advance of Triangular, the third horse.

In the mile and a furlong seventh race Arab finished first, Prince Abbot, second, and Resurrection, third.

Episcopal Team Wins.

Ballston, Va., Oct. 12 (Spl.).—A 40-yard drive in the final period gave Episcopal High School's second team a 7-to-10 victory over Washington-Lee High second team here today. The winning touchdown came on a pass from Waterman to Naff from the 10-yard line.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INSCRIPTION, $8.70, $4.10, $3.50; GIFTED LADY, $4.00, $3.00; VOLGADALE, $7.50.

INSCRIPTION, going stoutly while in close pursuit of the early leaders, came willingly under a hard drive during the stretch run and was up in the concluding strides. GIFTED LADY shook off TRIPLE STAR while under stout pressure, then continued resolutely after regaining a slight lead. VOLGADALE moved up fast on the inside entering the home stretch, went to the leaders to draw on almost even terms, and fought it out stubbornly. BUY STRAIGHT, on the outside while racing prominently, could not better her position during the stretch drive. BUDDLING SPRING lost ground the entire trip. She closed gamely when straightened for the closing test. FAIR VERBENA could not reach contention. TRIPLE STAR had nice speed for five furlongs and then weakened. WATCH IN had a rough trip. QUEENS FLAG was pinched back soon after the start.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:13. Off at 2:15. Winner, M. Lowenstein's br. g. (4), by Bostonian—Birka. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY COUNSELLOR, $47.00, $24.40, $9.20; SOME GOOD, $13.00, $8.50; SANG FROID, $9.80.

MY COUNSELLOR, displaying improvement and never far from the leaders in the early stages, reached the pacemakers with good speed when entering the home stretch, and was up in the last sixteenth. SOME GOOD raced BALLY BAY into submission in the first half-mile, saved ground, and then held on courageously for the closing drive. SANG FROID was kept on the outside while close to the pacemakers, made a strong effort to reach the winner after gaining command, but was not good enough. POSTSCRIPT weaved her way between horses to enter into a contending position and then came willingly for the closing drive. COYA overcame early interference and closed gamely when clear. BALLY BAY stopped badly in the last quarter-mile. WISE ADVOCATE finished with a bold rush after trouble hit his field. DIS DAT was never a factor. KNIGHT OF OLD and CHATTERDOO tired.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:43. Off at 2:47½. Winner, J. Arthur's b. m. (5), by Alibi—Superbum. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 4-5, 1:40 1-5, 1:45 2-5.

†Mrs. M. N. Bond-B. Bond entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOKIE B., $30.40, $9.20, $4.10; TAUNTON, $6.00, $3.60; †CAMPAGNA, $2.50.

BOKIE B., avoiding crowding going to the first turn, went restrained for the first five furlongs and then moved up stoutly on the outside to engage the leaders at the final turn, wore CAMPAGNA down after a stout issue, but had to be vigorously handled to stall off TAUNTON. Latter, lunged and fell before a start; he saved ground in early racing until well in his stride, came to the outside in the last half-mile, and finished wearing the winner down at every stride. CAMPAGNA, placed close up in the early stages, worked his way into a slight lead, but failed to rally when straightened for the final drive. MARYS MAY bettered her position when put to pressure, then continued finally until the stretch. WICKLIFFE swung around his field with a rush at the last curve, but faltered through the stretch run. TIGHT WAD was unable to reach contention. EDYTH M. and HANDLEY were used up making the early pace.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:16. Off at 3:19½. Winner, R. Bradley's b. c. (2), by Black Toney—Paradise Girl. Trained by H. J. Thompson. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:13 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIT OF SORROW, $4.70, $3.70, $2.70; STAR CHASE, $14.20, $5.10; NELL BARTON, $3.40.

BIT OF SORROW, taken under slight restraint when moving into command, stalled off keen contention from NELL BARTON in the first five furlongs, was shaken up for the final drive, and held STAR CHASE safe. Latter went along close to the leaders while on the outside, responded to punishment, but then finished in a rush. NELL BARTON forced a steady pace and held on well when the final test came. TWOADAY, allowed to drop out of early contention after breaking forwardly, swung to the outside in the last five-sixteenths and finished fastest of all. LITTLE DINAH could not improve her position. SPANISH LAD showed improvement. APERITIF was done early. ARCOR was overmatched.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; handicap. For all ages. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:52½. Winner, J. B. Buchanan's br. c. (3), by Happy Argo—Anastasia. Trined by T. L. Evans. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY GO, $4.00, $2.90, $2.30; DUST GIRL, $3.80, $2.80; †GIGGLING, $2.50.

HAPPY GO had nice speed to take command soon after the start, went along under restraint until reaching home stretch, then came out without effort and mildly shaken up. DUST GIRL rated within striking distance of the winner in the early stages, made some effort approaching home stretch, but could not threaten when put to a drive. GIGGLING went strongly in the first half-mile, then weakened gradually.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:23½. Winner, Audley Farm's ch. c. (3), by Bright Knight—Markiluna. Trained by J. Everman. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JESTER B., $5.90, $4.10, $3.30; MANAGER BILL, $5.90. $4.70; TRIANGULAR, $5.40.

JESTER B. came with excellent courage after getting into position and was up inside the last sixteenth. MANAGER BILL went around his field with a rush when midway of the final turn, then held on with good mettle. TRIANGULAR rallied strongly after driving on almost equal terms with the first two in the last furlong. POTION closed stoutly when finding room on the inside during the stretch drive. MY BOSS was outrun. BIG SHOW stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:53. Off at 4:56. Winner, W. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARAB, $13.00, $5.80, $4.00; PRINCE ABBOT, $8.70, $5.00; RESURRECTION, $2.90.

ARAB, following close to RESURRECTION while going under slight restraint for seven furlongs, gained a slight lead midway of the final turn and, holding on courageously thereafter, just lasted to withstand PRINCE ABBOT. Latter, restrained back of the leaders while racing wide, challenged boldly at the stretch turn when placed to punishment and continued to wear the winner down steadily. RESURRECTION, rated in front and saving a lot of ground, held on willingly and offered a late rally. CHEROKEE SAL went prominently and had no excuses. OLAMAY would not extend herself at any stage. SYRIAC could not threaten.

Wool Goods Mart Reports Army Sales

Trading Remains Slow as Buyers Await Lines for Spring.

New York, Oct. 12.—Wool goods markets continued rather slow last week, with the strike virtually settled, according to a report issued today by the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. Among the outstanding developments of the week were heavy purchases of wool cloths by the United States Army.

One contract was made for 300,000 yards of flannel shirting. In addition, the Army bought 350,000 yards of 18-ounce serge and 175,000 yards of 24-ounce elastique. The Army will ask for bids next week on 1,000,000 yards of 10½-ounce wool flannel shirting and 500,000 yards of 13-ounce serge.

"Business for the most part was slow as buyers awaited the opening of the bulk of spring lines before placing initial orders," says the exchange service. "It is believed that little bulk business will be done for several weeks. Men's clothing sales took a decided upward turn. Crisp autumnal days at the beginning of the week helped retailers to move stocks of suits and topcoats. Sales of topcoats were especially noteworthy. Retailers also reported a brisk business on wool dresses and cloaks. Sales of wool dresses thus far are the largest in years.

"Wool goods mills are now naming prices on men's wear worsted suitings for the spring. Quotations show a substantial drop from those ruling at the beginning of the fall season. On many representative staple cloths, prices are down 10 to 15 per cent. The decline reflects to some extent the drop in raw wool values and the prices being paid for wool in Texas and other Western States. In addition, it shows the desire of mills to acquire business with which to start idle machinery. The reductions announced on worsted cloths caused no surprise as prices had been tending lower for months, and new quotations were regarded in many quarters as further evidence of the comparatively low levels at which business had been done for months."

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—The question of the price level has once more come into the national limelight.

Prices of several leading staples, such as wheat and cotton had been declining for weeks. The reorganized NRA was veering away from control of prices and production. Whisperings started up in business and financial quarters that the Federal administration was giving up its program of lifting prices, in favor of finding levels at which the greatest volume could be sold.

This made buyers cautious and a tendency developed to wait and see if materials could not be purchased at lower levels. That in itself tended to depress prices. A deflationary cycle seemed to be beginning, which threatened to interfere with the moderate seasonal recovery in business.

On Wednesday the scene was changed. President Roosevelt made it clear at his press conference at the White House that the Administration has not abandoned price lifting. On Thursday, Donald Richberg, head policy maker for the NRA, attended a meeting of the American Iron & Steel Institute, and told reporters a cut in steel prices had not even been discussed. "I'm rooting for stability," he added.

At the same time, the presence of Prof. George F. Warren, as a luncheon guest at the White House recalled his work in the boosting of the gold price between October 22, 1933, and January 31, last, when the price was finally fixed at $35, making a dollar depreciated in terms of gold to 59.06 per cent of its old parity. Then a Senator who had called at the White House expressed the personal view that a further rise in the gold price was not impossible. This stirred up visions in speculative quarters of an immediate depreciation of the dollar. The dollar dropped in tumultous foreign exchange dealings. Staples and stocks were bid up in a manner not witnessed in weeks.

But conservative quarters in Wall Street for once failed to get excited, and gilt edged bonds, which should have declined along with the dollar to give a complete inflation pattern to the markets, held firmly.

These quarters thought that the Administration had merely sought to check an unjustified deflation movement, and noted with particular interest that it was prepared to check any runaway advance.

The market closed irregular.

Paris—The government's success in obtaining subscriptions to the 4½ per cent unlimited loan sent prices higher on the bourse today in a quiet session. Improved quotations of basic commodities in the United States caused a rise in rubber and copper shares here. The closing was firm.

Berlin—The tone on the boerse today generally was cheerful all through the session. Mines and dyestuff issues especially were buoyant. The market closed steady.

Field Enumerators Will Be Selected

Army of 25,000 Is Needed for Farm Census of 1935.

(Associated Press.)

The 25,000 field supervisors and enumerators required for the 1935 farm census will be selected after consultation with Democratic Congressmen.

William L. Austin, director of the Census Bureau, said yesterday that he would follow this policy. The farm census will begin January 1.

"The members of Congress," Austin said, "are being asked to consult with agricultural agencies and business groups in their districts in order to procure the best available persons."

The census will require 223 supervisors. They will receive about $900 each for three months' work. Enumerators will be employed for an average of from 15 to 20 days.

No residents of cities will be hired. The supervisors and enumerators will be selected from the rural districts in which farms are located and every effort will be made to select farmers, their wives, sons and daughters.

Railroads to Equip With New Brakes

I. C. C. Makes It Compulsory to Use Latest Form of Safety Device.

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—Dow, Jones & Co. says that more than two-thirds of the class I railroads of the country voted this week to equip existing freight cars with the new type "AB" brake developed by the Westinghouse Air Brake Co. The New York Air Brake Co. is also permitted to manufacture the brake under a license agreement, the agency said.

The new brake has been compulsory on newly manufactured cars under a ruling by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the American Railway Association, the agency says.

The decision to equip all cars now in service with the brake will mean that around 2,000,000 additional cars will be equipped. The program is spread over a 10-year period, the agency says.

Commodities Reach Peak Since 1930

New York, Oct. 12.—Striking the highest point in 49 months, or since September 1, 1930, Dun's Index Number of Wholesale Commodity Prices reached $170,032 on October 1. While the increase during September amounted to only 84.4c, or 0.50 per cent, as contrasted with a gain of 0.76 per cent during August, it continued the upward trend for the fifth month, and maintained the level above that of the year preceding for the eighteenth consecutive month.

The current index is higher by 4.6 per cent than the $162,632 recorded on October 1, 1933, and 24.5 per cent and 24.6 per cent, respectively, in excess of the 1932 and 1931 comparative figures. It exceeded the 1930 position by only 1.1 per cent, and failed by 11.5 per cent to reach the October 1, 1929, index vehicle registered $192,204. The accumulated rise in commodity prices now totals 33.2 per cent since March 1, 1933, while the advance from July 1, 1932, when the index stood at $125,316, which was the lowest figure touched in 17 years, amounts to 35.7 per cent.

As in the previous month, a decline was recorded for three and an advance for four of the seven major categories which comprise the index. The range in either direction, however, was held to narrow margins, the largest increase amounting to only 48.7 cents for other food. The advance in breadstuffs was held to 28.6 cents, in contrast to a gain of $2.493 for August, but at $28.127 the index for this group is the highest in exactly four years, or, since October 1, 1930, when it stood at $28.984.

While meat was down 53.3 cents for the month, the index of $16.784 has not been equaled since March 1, 1931. Following a drop of $3.137 in the month preceding, dairy and garden advanced 44.7 cents, while the gain in metals amounted to 28 cents. Both clothing and miscellaneous were lower than a month ago.

More Than 50 Artists Engaged for Anniversary Bill at Warner Brothers' Earle

Strauss Group Of Dancers Is Late Addition

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It now appears that more than 50 performers will participate in the elaborate anniversary bill scheduled for the Earle Theater a week from today to commemorate the establishment of the present vaudeville policy in the Warner Brothers' ace house.

The latest addition to the program is a group of 16 Sara Mildred Strauss dancers, presenting "new and dazzling routines," to quote the words of the modest announcement that finds its way to this desk. Another unit of Sara Mildred Strauss dancers formed a part of a recent stage bill at the Earle and scored a decided success with the unique contributions they brought to the vaudeville portion of the entertainment.

The stars of the fourth anniversary program, already announced, include Maxine Doyle, first mistress of ceremonies at Thirteenth and E streets and now a contract player for Warner Brothers, who will appear in conjunction with Joe E. Brown's latest picture, "Six Day Bike Rider," in which she has the feminine lead; Guy Kibbee, popular Warner Brothers' character comedian, and Paul Ash, "the genial giant of jazz," whose picture house work was one of the sensations of an earlier day in Chicago. Ash will bring a band of 25 with him to lend added dimensions to a practically gala week.

Presented as a Revue.

This program will be something entirely apart from the fixed form of the Earle's vaudeville bills, and will be presented after the manner of a revue, with Tom Gentry and the Ambassadors on the stage to provide musical background and Paul Ash serving as a sort of super-special m. c.

When Maxine Doyle first stepped her foot on the Earle stage, expecting to remain in Washington only a few weeks, but finally measuring her engagement in years, Belle Baker was the headliner of the bill and exercised a protective guardianship over the tousle-headed youngster, whose "than-n-n-k yo-u-u" caught on immediately and stayed caught for the greater part of three years.

All uncertainty as to the proper spelling of the name of the musical picture Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's has in the offing seems now to have been dispelled. On the stage the play was "Gay Divorce." Now, and with Fred Astaire, its original star, still in the title role he created, it is known on the screen as "The Gay Divorcee"—an extraordinary change in nomenclature for a vehicle for a male star. It is in this subject that Astaire and Ginger Rogers introduce the "Continental," the dance its sponsors expect to repeat the sensational popular success of the "Carioca." With regard to this, I beg leave to direct your notice to the remarks of Mr. Scheuer, pinch hitting for Ed Schallert, on this page.

All Right, Bring 'Em On!

Through an inadvertent and inexplicable omission of certain necessary qualifying clauses and expository remarks, this space yesterday was made to convey one or two priceless nuggets of misinformation.

For instance, one statement seemed to say that that admirable scrivener, Mr. John Peter Toohey, was responsible for the story of "Bring on the Girls," a farcical trifle coming to the National in the near future without the tunes and most of the girls it was expected to contain. What Mr. Toohey actually was responsible for was the correction of Washington's mistaken idea that it might expect a musical comedy in "Bring on the Girls."

Authorship was Responsible.

The story, as almost everybody must know by now, was concocted in one of their more insane moments by that indefatigable laborer in the vineyard, George S. Kaufman, former newspaper columnist in this city, and Morrie Ryskind, a young man whose nimble views on certain sociological matters once brought about his separation from the student body of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's Columbia University.

In this distinguished authorship, no doubt, lies the genesis of the original erroneous belief that "Bring on the Girls" must be a musical satire, if it was a satire at all, and everybody says it is. The Messrs. Kaufman and Ryskind, one seems to recall, had more than a little to do with "Of Thee I Sing" and its equally cogent, but not so popular, sequel, "Let 'em Eat Cake." There was music as well as Ralph Riggs, currently fighting railroad trains with indifferent success in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," at the National, in both of those.

Regardless of the useful purposes Mr. Riggs might serve in the new comedy, the tunes, I dare say, will not be missed. I reach this conclusion after having listened to Mr. Toohey's comprehensive outline of the plot of "Bring on the Girls," which I pledged my word not to repeat in print this far in advance of the engagement at the National.

The play has itself an hilarious time poking good-natured and harmless fun at certain aspects of the New Deal as they manifest themselves particularly through the functioning of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. If President Roosevelt could arrange to attend, I suspect that he would get a great kick out of it.

It will be evidence enough of hilarity for many that the droll and deliberate Mr. Jack Benny, of comparatively recent radio fame, appears in a stellar role. Mr. Benny is a very funny fellow.

Although there was considerable foreboding as to its possible reception at just this time, Paramount's picturization of the slightly racy stage play, "The Pursuit of Happiness," by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Langner, thinly disguised under a pair of trick noms de theater, has been approved by the Daughters of the American Revolution as a wholly salutary and innocuous bit of screen entertainment. This is the play that bases its amusing complications upon the quaint old custom of bundling—a Colonial device for cheating low temperatures. I am given to believe that Paramount craftily took the sting out by kidding the play all over the lot, thus rendering it virtually impossible to take anything it contains seriously.

More of That Banquet.

Members of additional committees to be in charge of the first annual banquet of the local Variety Club, Tent No. 11, in the National Organization, at the Willard Hotel on Saturday night, November 24, were announced yesterday by John J. Payette, chief barker and general chairman.

The entertainment committee is headed by Carter Tate Barron, manager of Loew's Eastern Division, and includes Harry E. Lohmeyer, manager of the Earle; I. Rappaport, William K. Saxton, Loew's city manager in Baltimore; N. Stiefel, Guy Wonders, Leonard B. Schloss and Joseph P. Morgan.

Rudolph Berger, Washington branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been appointed chairman of the reception committee and will have serving with him Fulton Brylawski, J. A. Burns, Arthur De Titta, local manager of Fox Movietone News; E. Etris, John Firnkoess, H. P. Rome, A. E. Lichtman, I. Weinberg and L. Thalheimer.

Will Be Worth the Price.

Reservations and seating will be in the hands of J. B. Fitzgerald, assisted by Alan Bachrach, George Gill, Dr. Frank T. Shyne and Hardie Meakin.

Charles Kranz has been selected as chairman of the hotels and transportation committee. He will be assisted by Phil Ershler, R. E. Warn and Roy Knight.

Plans are already afoot to make this first of the Variety Club's formal functions one of the most notable affairs in the Capital's social annals. Arrangements are being made for a superlative list of entertainers and it is hinted that the list of famous names in pictures, on the stage and in radio who will be present will include many surprises. Tickets, if I have my memory on straight, are priced at $7.50 each.

From the present outlook, the rout will be worth every cent of the tariff assessed.

Maurice S. White, well known Washington writer and literary critic, will lecture on "Some Bible Friends on the Modern Stage" next Wednesday evening, October 17, at the home of Dorothy White, 4400 Q street northwest. The admission charge will be 35 cents. The receipts will be devoted to the Columbia Players' Little Theater Fund. Refreshments will be served following the talk.

Incombatibility Note.

Mady Christians' American screen debut—Mady is a lady renowned on the continental stages of Europe—will be made in a film paradoxically entitled "Wicked Woman."

How can Christians be wicked women?

Their Beauty Decorates Screen

CHIC SALE

Thus he will enjoy the distinction of creating the first feature - length talkie in the new Technicolor three-tone process, with Miriam Hopkins in the title role. Remembering his accomplishments with the Mlles. West and Hepburn, one rather suspects that he will send Miss Hopkins back to her employer, Samuel Goldwyn, a first-magnitude star.

Production in "Becky Sharp" (Thackeray's "Vanity Fair") starts November 1. Nigel Bruce is the only other performer so far announced.

Wagner Signs Miss Dunne.

Definitely ending speculation, Irene Dunne is the lucky lady selected for the lead in "Private Worlds." It looked very much for a while as though the assignment would go to Greta Garbo. Ann Harding also was mentioned.

Miss Dunne, who is weary of portraying sad, singing, sheltered sweethearts of the bustle era, will go to the Wanger organization after "Sweet Adeline," the gay-nineties operetta, which she is singing for Warners now.

Wilson Era Projected.

Warner Brothers are dickering for the purchase of "The Intimate Papers of Col. House," by the colonel himself. E. M. House was President Wilson's right-hand man and his papers are regarded as throwing extraordinary light on the World War period when they appeared in print.

Col. House, in England, has specified that he wants George Arliss to impersonate him (the colonel) if the picture is made. But this is regarded as unlikely.

Film Pageant in Review.

Lou Silvers, head of Columbia's melody department, wrote the music for Mary Pickford's first broadcast series, which started Wednesday over a National hook-up.

Chic Sale has been signed to do six more shorts for M-G-M.

Lois Wilson will play Shirley Temple's mother in "Bright Eyes." Shirley will sing a number in this picture, "On the Good Ship Lollipop."

Herman Bing, who steals the funniest single scene in "The Merry Widow," will be in "The Night Is Young" as Ramon Novarro's valet.

Smash Dance Film.

By the simple expedient of taking a stage play called "The Gay Divorce" and adding a final "e," RKO-Radio has succeeded in transposing the best musical film in its history. Nor is this a left-handed compliment. "The Gay Divorcee," previewed Monday evening, would be tops for any company.

The dancing of Fred Astaire makes the film extraordinary. To put it bluntly, it is the only dancing we have had on the screen; and it makes this film as sensational in its field as Grace Moore's singing made "One Night of Love." With typical astigmatism, the producers have ballyhooed the "Continental," a flash number designed to replace the Carioca, quite unaware, apparently, that "Night and Day," as danced by Mr. Astaire and Ginger Rogers, transcends anything in grace, beauty and fragility since the flying-trapeze days of Douglas Fairbanks, sr., or maybe Nijinsky.

"The Gay Divorcee" has most of the merits and few of the shortcomings of a stage farce that has been photographed. Its decor is handsome (barring some processed shots), its humor ingratiating, its music easy to take, and its ensemble miles too long.

Columbus Paid Honor by City At His Statue

Washington Italian societies and Knights of Columbus linked the Capital to the Nation yesterday in celebrating the 442d anniversary of the discovery of the New World.

There was no official Columbus Day holiday here as in other sections of the country, but the Italian societies and the Knights went down to Union Station Plaza to pay tribute in wreath-laying ceremonies to the memory of the man who crossed the Atlantic in three small ships to prove the world was not flat.

G. E. Herring, State deputy of the Knights of Columbus, placed a wreath on the Columbus statue in ceremonies held at 10:30 a. m. Walter R. Plant, District deputy, presided, and the invocation was delivered by Mgr. Eugene J. Connelly, the Knights of Columbus chaplain and pastor of St. Peter's Church.

A half hour later another wreath-laying service was performed, this time by a delegation representing the Italian-American organizations of the city. The wreath was laid by William Amoroso, president of the Italian Federation.

Two Fetes in One.

In the afternoon the Spanish Ambassador gave a reception in honor of the day, celebrating the Dia de Raza (Day of the Spanish Races) as well. Representatives of Spain, Portugal and the Latin-American nations were present and the embassy broke out for the first time in Washington, the flag of the Americas, emblem adopted at the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo last December.

Mrs. Ana del Pungar-Burke, Chilean pianist, played a program of modern Spanish music and Dr. Enrique Finot, Minister of Bolivia, spoke.

Twice during the night representatives of the Knights of Columbus, District Deputy L. Harold Sothoron and Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody, gave Columbus Day addresses on the radio. Mr. Carmody was heard over a Nation-wide network.

Members of the staff of the Italian Embassy and representatives of District and Federal governments attended a celebration in Central High School last night sponsored by the Italian-American groups.

Davidge Speaker.

They heard addresses by Walter Davidge, president of the Italy America Society, and Prof. Giuseppe Prezzolini, of Columbus University, and a musical program by Malda Sani.

Mr. Amoroso presided at the services and Hugo A. Carusi, executive assistant to the Attorney General, was master of ceremonies.

Taxi Company Sued For $10,000 Damages

William F. Anderson, 2544 Seventeenth street northwest, yesterday in the District Supreme Court filed suit for $10,000 damages from the Independent Taxi Owners Association and August A. Halzner, a driver.

Through Attorney James F. Reilly, Mr. Anderson said he received serious injuries last February when he was felled by a cab of the company's at Sixteenth and M streets northwest.

David Pfeiffer, Musician, Dies

Father Was Organizer Of First Naval Academy Band.

David G. Pfeiffer, 71, for more than half a century prominent in musical circles, died early yesterday at his residence, 3514 Thirteenth street northwest.

A native of Annapolis, Md., Mr. Pfeiffer was reared in a musical background, his father, John Pfeiffer, having been organizer of the first Naval Academy Band.

Mr. Pfeiffer studied in Frankfort, Germany, and was appointed a member of the Zurich Musical Exposition in 1885. In 1898 he was elected to membership in the New York Musical Manuscript Society.

In 1888 he engaged in his profession in Washington, and remained active for 40 years. As a leader in musical activities he was a former vice president of the Musical Art Society.

Mr. Pfeiffer was a Master Mason, a Royal Arch Mason and a Knight Templar. He also served as president of the Columbia Heights Community Council.

Surviving Mr. Pfeiffer are his widow, Mrs. Nellie Pfeiffer; a daughter, Mrs. Milton Ladd, of St. Paul, and three sons, David C. Pfeiffer, of Dallas, Tex.; John J. Pfeiffer, of Boston, and Karl G. Pfeiffer, of Pullman, Wash. He also leaves five grandchildren. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

Walt Mason Himself

Toothache.

My good old neighbor, Grigsby Grimes, has got an aching tooth; I've said to him a dozen times, "Go to the dentist's booth; in half a minute he'll extract the cause of all your grief, and, with a simple twist, in fact, he'll bring you sweet relief. There is no sense in bearing pain that can be thus destroyed; there is no sense in stress and strain that mortals may avoid. Go take your face to old Doc Kongs, the dentist by the lake, and with his crowbar and his tongs he will relieve your ache." "I've journeyed there a dozen times, but when I reach his lair, the aching stops," said Grigsby Grimes, "so I didn't hit his chair. It aches until my head is sore, it jars me night and day, but when I reach the dentist's joint before the pains are still, I surely would not disappoint that man of fame and skill." "You think about yourself alone," I said, "which course is cheap, forgetting how your midnight groan robs neighbors of their sleep. The whole night long you walk the floor, the racket never stops; the delegate who lives next door would like to call the cops. Such red-hot language you repeat as scents the humid air; the pastor, just across the street, must listen in despair. You bring distress to age and youth and grief to kindly hearts, because you stick to that old tooth that aches by fits and starts."

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

THERE'S one melody beloved of glee clubs, loiterers at taverns and of anyone who has ever felt the whip of the wind, heard the bay of the hounds and a trumpet's note sounding a charge to the hunt. The song is "John Peel," which has made England's traditional hero of the hunt known throughout the world.

"Peel's 'view hallo!' would waken the dead" and "the sound of his voice brought me from my bed and the cry of the hounds which he oft times lead" . . . these are the phrases that, heard in soft melody, quicken the blood and make one want to don a red jacket.

The tiny village of Caldbeck, Cumberland, England, where Peel lived "once on a day," this month celebrates the hundredth birthday of this intrepid gentleman, and next Saturday the colorful ceremonies in his honor will be broadcast here by short wave over C. B. S. networks.

"D'ye ken John Peel?" . . . well, on that day the calls of the huntsmen as they start the chase, the cry of the hounds, and the singing of the "John Peel" song will be heard and an English narrator will describe the scene.

SOME balmy, clear night next week you will be invited to take your radio set, if it's a portable, up to the roof. You are supposed to sit down and look up at the stars . . . for WJSV will unfold the aura of the heavens and tell why Cassiopela's Chair is tilted over . . . why Orion, the Great Bear, Castor and Pollux and Scorpio received their names as constellations of the firmament.

To do this, WJSV will transport one mike, one announcer and one astronomer to the roof of the Earle Building where you'll hear: "Do you see that star?"—then you'll be told its history in nontechnical terms. The astronomer's name hasn't been revealed and WJSV doesn't know what announcer will be used, as a balmy, clear night does strange things even to announcers.

TINY figures of men in silhouette balancing on the rim of Washington's lone obelisk have fixed the gaze of many a passer-by. The men, need it be said, are not radio announcers . . . despite all the threats and avowals from that contingent boldly proclaiming that they would broadcast from the top.

And now that the corset encircling the Monument is well over 500 feet, Ted Kimball, WMAL lad who first started the vogue of pointing out how grand an announcer's voice might sound at that height, is beginning to look testily at parachutes and wish he'd been assigned to the Navy Band.

Actually, if N. B. C. networks will take the broadcast, WMAL then will pay line charges to the Monument and some fine morning Ted will ride to the top in an elevator and step out on a scaffolding 555 feet from the turf . . . probably to find that the gale will muffle his voice.

"THE artist needs but a roof, a crust of bread and his easel, and all the rest God gives him in abundance," once remarked Albert Pinkham Ryder, painter, whose works, seen here at the National Gallery of Art, will be commented upon today in the "Art in America" series on WMAL at 8 p. m.

The art of George Inness, Homer D. Martin and Alexander H. Wyant, landscape painters, also will be discussed in the talks brought to the air under auspices of leading art galleries of the country.

OPERETTAS famous during the last 60 years will be featured by Roxy, at 8 o'clock on C. B. S. tonight, and, to grace his juvenile boards, the "gang" will be joined by a 60-year-old youngster whose operetta appearances are almost as famous as DeWolf Hopper's.

Frank Moulan, comedian, heard most recently here with the Milton Aborn troupe in their Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire, is the youngster. Perhaps you remember his dry but breezy versions of Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B., in "Pinafore;" his "Judge" in "Trial by Jury," his Bunthorne in "Patience," his "Koko" in "The Mikado" . . . the list is endless.

Roxy's "Operetta Cavalcade" will include excerpts from "The Chimes of Normandy," "The Prince of Pilsen," "The Sultan of Sulu," "The Merry Widow," "A Waltz Dream," "Rose of Algeria," The Madcap Duchess' and "The Three Musketeers" . . . all operettas that date from 1877 to 1928.
